LONDON BATTERED IN SEVERE RAID

Heaviest Since Nazi Air Blitzkrieg Commenced

AFTER ITS VICIOUS INDISCRIMINATE BOMBARDMENT OF COVENTRY ON THURSDAY NIGHT THE LUFTWAFFE ON FRIDAY NIGHT TURNED ITS ATTENTION BACK FROM THE PROVINCES TO LONDON, SUBJECTING THE CAPITAL TO THE HEAVIEST BOMBARDMENT SINCE THE INTENSIVE AIR WARFARE BEGAN.

Despite the weight of the raid, however, and the fact that considerable damage was done, the number of casualties was not as great as might have been expected.

Among buildings damaged were three hotels, two of which suffered direct hits though nobody was injured, while a third had some windows broken.

Over 500 bombers participated in the raid on the capital and outskirts. As well as hotels, seven hospitals, two convents, two rest centres, two cinemas, a block of flats, a school and a furniture depository were hit.

The Air Ministry describes the attack as heavy and sustained and says the attacking aircraft were continually harassed by the defences and forced to operate at such a height as to make accurate bombing impossible.

High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped indiscriminately in many parts of the capital. Many fires were started but were brought under control with remarkable speed in difficult conditions.

A number of people were killed and others injured but preliminary reports indicated that the number is not so great as might have been expected in view of the weight of the attack.

Elsewhere there was comparatively little enemy activity and little damage and few casualties were reported.

No Respite

A defence worker described the raid on London as the worst night he had ever experienced and said the raiders came in groups.

The noise of engines was loud and continuous indicating that the raiders must have been in formations and not flying singly.

A heavy death roll is feared as the result of the destruction of a boarding house and some flats.

Boarding House Hit

There was no respite from the raid which went on for hour after hour and in the outskirts of the capital three wards in a hospital were destroyed.

Two hundred fire bombs fell in the grounds but no-one was hurt. The patients walked or were carried to safety.

An isolation hospital in the Home Counties was hit by two bombs, which just missed the children's ward.

The south coast and the Midlands also came in for some attention.

Vital Services Secure

Despite the intensity of the raids none of London's vital services were affected and there was little or no damage to military objectives.

The raiders were met by a heavy barrage from which cloud patches afforded them little protection as they dodged from one area to another.

Dead Airman Found

Two enemy bombers brought down before midnight on Friday both crashed in Essex, one near Harlow and the other at Hornden.

Later in the night another raider was brought down in Shropshire.

RIBBENTROP NOW OWES VISIT TO ROME

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Nazi Foreign Minister, is expected in political and diplomatic circles in Rome to visit the Italian capital shortly, the Swiss newspaper "Basler Nachrichten" said yesterday.

It is held in Rome that M. Molotov's Berlin visit has rendered a further exchange of views between Germany and Italy necessary.—Reuter.

HEAVY ATTACK SHAKES HAMBURG

R.A.F. bombers on Friday night heavily attacked docks, oil plants and other objectives in Hamburg; it was the second night in succession that Hamburg had been bombed.

Aerodromes in enemy occupied territory and some of the invasion ports were also bombed.

The raid on Hamburg was admitted over the German radio in a broadcast to America which described the attack as a "failure," but it is significant that the German home broadcast made no mention of the raid.

Building Shattered

An Air Ministry communique, describing the attack on Hamburg as "exceptionally heavy," says that other forces of bombers battered military objectives from Norway to France.

In Hamburg the main targets were railways, shipyards, docks and public utility services. In the dock area one explosion shattered a large building.

Oil refineries and the Blohm and Voss yards, which have been attacked previously, were bombed and many fires started.

On the north side of Hamburg a gasworks was bombed and an electricity station in the Altona district attacked. Other targets were heavily punished.

Kiel Raid

At Kiel dockyards were bombed and raids were also made on Ostend and Calais.

One of our bombers shot down an enemy fighter which tried to interfere.

A Heinkel float 'plane was shot down by aircraft of the Coastal Command which carried out bombing operations from Norway to France.

Military stores and buildings as well as aerodromes were attacked; from all operations only two of our aircraft were lost.—Reuter.

U.S. MAY BREAK OFF RELATIONS WITH GERMANY

THE UNITED STATES IS MOVING SLOWLY BUT SURELY TO THE POINT OF BREAKING OFF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH GERMANY, ACCORDING TO WELL QUALIFIED SPOKESMEN IN WASHINGTON YESTERDAY.

Reuter's Washington correspondent says that the belief has been sharply bolstered by the fact that Mr. Cordell Hull has now given a completely free hand to the Dies Committee which is investigating un-American activities.

This is regarded as highly significant, since hitherto the official tendency has been to restrain the scope of the investigations of the Dies Committee lest the disclosures made should result in public clamour for the severance of relations with Germany.

Some officials in Washington are reported to be saying privately that United States representatives in German territory recently have encountered endless difficulty in collecting information, and they argue that there is, therefore, no reason to allow German diplomats full freedom to obtain what information they want in the United States.

It is understood that the Dies Committee proposes immediately to investigate the activities in the United States of the German Consulates and the German Trans-Ocean News Agency.—Reuter.

R.A.F. PLASTERS ITALIAN MOBILE COLUMN

AN ITALIAN MOTOR transport column on the move in the area north of Koritza was successfully bombed and machine-gunned by the R.A.F. and great damage inflicted, it was announced from headquarters of the British Air Force in Greece yesterday.

An important bridge over which Italian reinforcements were moving was completely destroyed. A large number of troops were taken by surprise and casualties almost certainly were heavy.

A pilot who took part in the raid said: "We dived down from 20,000 feet right over the column which was tightly packed.

I saw one bomb burst in the centre of a large lorry, and the Italians were running like hares. "Altogether it was a most successful day."—Reuter.

COVENTRY SHAKES AMERICA

"The disaster at Coventry is a clear warning to America to rush that material aid to Great Britain which we are pledged to give and which our people overwhelmingly desire to give," declared the "New York Times" yesterday.

"There is no time for us to send it at our leisure. The British are more than ever dependent on us now for increasing the aeroplane strength which can in time defeat Hitler's challenge to the world.

"If the destruction at Coventry awakens our people to a new sense of Britain's danger the victims of this horror will not have died in vain."—Reuter.

THAILAND MASSING TROOPS

This statement is contained in a communique issued by Admiral Decoux, Governor-General of French Indo-China quoted by the Domei agency yesterday.

The communique said: "The Thai press has become remarkably provocative while Thai troops have been massed near the border.

DAYLIGHT RAIDS FEW

ENEMY AIR ACTIVITY OVER BRITAIN YESTERDAY WAS ONLY SLIGHT, WITH RAIDERS REPORTED NEAR LIVERPOOL AND ON THE WEST, EAST AND NORTH-EAST COASTS.

One raider appeared out of the clouds and dropped two bombs on a south-east coast town, causing some deaths. The 'plane was last seen pursued by Spitfires.—Reuter.

U.S. BID FOR CLEAN-UP IN FAR EAST: BRITISH NAVAL STRENGTH

MILITARY COMMENTATORS IN WASHINGTON ARE ALREADY SUGGESTING THAT THE CRIPPLING BLOW DEALT THE ITALIANS AT TARANTO WILL HAVE A GREAT EFFECT IN THE FAR EAST, ARGUING THAT THE CUTTING OF ITALY'S CAPITAL SHIP STRENGTH IN HALF WILL ENABLE BRITAIN TO SEND A BATTLE SQUADRON TO SINGAPORE.

They estimate Britain now has 16 capital ships in service while three more are coming into service shortly, enabling Britain to keep three at either end of the Mediterranean and five of the latest type for the Atlantic for general operations, permitting the five remaining ships to go to Singapore.

Major Fielding Eliot, well-known commentator, says: "With such British support, a policy of Anglo-American economic and naval pressure on Japan seems to offer the brightest of hopes for a clean-up of the Far Eastern situation and the consequent release of the resources of Australia, Malaya and India for unreserved support of the British Army in the Middle East."

There is a general feeling in Washington that British capital ships at Singapore would effect a notable decline in the bombastic statements of Japanese naval circles that the whole Orient and Australia will be taken into the Japanese Empire.—Reuter.

AMERICAN FEARS RELIEVED

Fears in Washington of an imminent Japanese move against the Dutch East Indies have been relieved by the newly signed oil deal, which is believed to have the tacit approval of the Netherlands, British and American Governments.

This, it is suggested in Washington, has been given in the hope of postponing the day of reckoning with Japan, which Japan is apparently determined to force on the whole of the Far East.

At the same time, reports received of the firm determination of the Netherlands East Indies to defend the colony has given much satisfaction in Washington, where the growing defensive strength of the N.E.I. is being further boosted by the supply of United States aircraft.—Reuter.

EGYPT'S NEXT PREMIER

TOKYO BID FOR PEACE IN CHINA

Although nothing concrete has been disclosed regarding the agreement reached at the Imperial Conference in Tokyo on Wednesday in the presence of the Emperor "undoubtedly some progress was made towards settlement of the China affair," said the "Miyako Shimbun" yesterday in an editorial.

The paper says: "Chungking had better consider peace before Japan formally recognises the new Nanking government."

Recalling the conversations between Hitler and M. Molotov, the Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, the paper comments:

"Although we hardly believe that Japanese-Soviet relations were discussed directly between them yet we think a strengthening of German-Soviet collaboration would greatly affect Japan indirectly."—Reuter.

20 SHOT DOWN ON FRIDAY

One more enemy fighter was shot down over England on Friday and two enemy bombers were destroyed during the night attacks on London, making a total of 20 aircraft destroyed on Friday.

Two British fighters were lost but the pilots are safe.—Reuter.

Molotov Cheerful

M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, arrived back in Moscow at midnight from his talks in Berlin:

The Ambassadors of China, Japan and Italy, the Ministers of Slovakia, Rumania and Bulgaria and the Danish, Hungarian and German Counsellors, as well as prominent Soviet officials, were at the station to greet him.

M. Molotov, who was in cheerful mood, inspected the guard of honour while the band played the Internationale.

KING AND QUEEN AT COVENTRY

The King and Queen yesterday visited Coventry and in the course of a tour of the city saw some of the results of Thursday night's horror raid.

Their Majesties spent a considerable time in the worst hit areas and talked with many who have lost their homes.

The Lord Mayor's Fund for Air Raid Relief has sent 3,000 blankets to Coventry for homeless. The blankets were contributed from Australia.

Meanwhile the Germans yesterday were gloating over the Coventry massacre, a Berlin commentator referring to it as "an example of traditional German thoroughness."—Reuter.

GREEKS TAKE A FURTHER 700 PRISONERS

The Greeks have taken a further 700 prisoners and have captured ten big guns, the communique reveals, while the Greek air force has bombed enemy troops in action and in air battles brought down three Italian 'planes; two Greek 'planes failed to return to their base.

The communique adds that enemy aircraft carried out indiscriminate bombing of some towns and villages in the interior of Greece. No military objectives were hit but a few people were wounded.

It is learned that fighting in the region of Koritza is extremely bitter and operations are continuing.

Desperate Fighting

Reuter learns in military circles in London that the Italian forces in Albania number 200,000 to 250,000 but that it is unlikely they could conduct a major campaign in Greece unless they are able to keep communications with Italy open.

This especially applies to Durazzo, which handles about 80 per cent of the heavy stores from Italy to Albania.

Completely Surprised

The recent reorganisation of the Italian forces is held to confirm the view that Italy was completely surprised by the strength of Greek resistance.

The Italian forces are now divided into two armies. General Vercellino, who will command one, was commander of a mechanised army. General Geloso will lead the second.

The Greeks are closing in on the Italians in a pincer movement on the Koritza sector according to latest reports from the front.

Untenable Position

All the southern and eastern heights of Morova have been occupied by the Greeks and the Italians are gradually being forced into an untenable position.

Advancing via Smolinia, in the Pindus sector, the Greeks reoccupied all Greek villages taken by the enemy.

Halted At Root

Commenting on the battle in the Pindus sector, the Greek radio yesterday called it "one of the most important in the war, because it halted the Italian drive at the root." — Reuter.

ITALIAN STORY OF FIGHTING

An Italian communique yesterday records artillery duels and infantry clashes on the Greek front and says Larissa was bombed and two Blenheims on the ground hit and others damaged.

Nine Greek 'planes, it claims, were shot down in air battles.

Mersa Matruh and Alexandria were bombed.

The Italians admit British air attacks on Kassala, Assab, Diredawa and Brindisi and also Sidi Barrani, Sollum and Bardia. — Reuter.

REVUE FOR WAR FUND

DANCES, SKETCHES AND SONGS WITH "LOCAL TOUCHES" WERE FEATURES OF A REVUE GIVEN IN THE LOWER HALL OF THE HELENA MAY INSTITUTE, GARDEN ROAD, AT 9.30 O'CLOCK LAST NIGHT BY MEMBERS OF THE V.A.D. NURSING DETACHMENT IN AID OF THE BRITISH WAR ORGANISATION FUND.

The show was produced by Mr Fortescue, and the large crowd which attended (all tickets were sold out) enjoyed themselves tremendously, even if one or two of the turns seemed to be a little under-rehearsed.

Among the official guests invited were Lieut.-Gen. E. F. Norton, H.E. the Acting Governor, and Major-General A. E. Grasett, the G.O.C.

COMMON SHARE OF SACRIFICE IN THE EMPIRE

NEW ZEALANDERS, like Britons at home, are asked to go without non-essential goods, it was stated in Wellington yesterday.

Mr. W. Nash, the New Zealand Finance Minister, commenting on the inter-Empire trade restrictions, said these were the outcome of discussions over a long period.

"Obviously it is unfair to suggest that the people of the United Kingdom should be deprived of some of their manufactures in order that they may be made available to people in other parts of the Empire.

"The United Kingdom Government is now approving the principle of treating the Empire as a unit and we should be willing to go without non-essential goods in order that the war effort may be developed to its maximum."

Further Cuts In Britain

The still further cut in luxuries in England was announced by Mr. Oliver Lyttleton, President of the Board of Trade, who reported cuts in 17 classes of goods supplies of which had been reduced by one-third.

Goods most affected are toilet goods, scent and other Christmas gifts. Some will be cut by a quarter and some by a half.

Mr. Lyttleton said this was in continuance of the policy begun nine months ago. He was sure the people of England would gladly dispense with luxuries if they felt it would add to the production of 'planes, tanks and other armaments.—Reuter.

SHOCK FOR VICHY

THE INFLUENCE OF THE FREE FRENCH MOVEMENT IN FRANCE IS EXPECTED TO STRENGTHEN AND OPPOSITION TO THE PETAIN GOVERNMENT TO INCREASE AS A RESULT OF THE EXPULSION OF FRENCH-SPEAKING INHABITANTS FROM LORRAINE, ACCORDING TO COMMENT IN THE SWISS PRESS YESTERDAY.

The Vichy correspondent of "La Suisse" reports that not only have the inhabitants of the Moselle Department — retaken from Germany in 1918 — been expelled but also those of the Mourthe and Moselle Department which has always belonged to France.

Italian residents, who are fairly numerous in these districts, have also been ejected.—Reuter.

Serious damage is reported to have been done to a Japanese military depot in Shasi, western Hupeh, during a fire which broke out yesterday afternoon and raged for several hours. Many houses were also damaged. Incendiarism is believed to be the cause of the fire. — Central News.

ONCE TOO OFTEN

A WELL-DRESSED YOUTH WAS BEFORE MR. E. HIMSWORTH AT KOWLOON YESTERDAY CHARGED WITH STEALING A PAIR OF SHOES BY TRICK AND WITH ATTEMPTING TO STEAL ANOTHER PAIR.

Accused, Fung Mo-chun, 20, was sentenced to two months' hard labour.

Sergeant Pennell said that on Monday, accused went to a shop in Laichikok Road and ordered a pair of shoes, ordering delivery at La Salle College, and giving his name as Chan Sui-wing.

Two hours later, the foki went to La Salle and was met by accused, who produced a $10 note and asked for change. As the foki had no change, he was told to wait. The foki waited and waited, but accused did not return.

On the following afternoon, accused went to another shop in Shanghai Street and tried a similar trick. This foki refused to let him take away the shoes. Accused went into the college stating that he would be back after he got the money, and was there arrested by the authorities who had been informed of his previous theft.

ALLEGATION WITHDRAWN

AN ALLEGATION AGAINST A POLICE CONSTABLE, C.P.C. 363, THAT HE TOOK 70 CENTS FROM A PRISONER WHILE SEARCHING HIM, WAS WITHDRAWN AT KOWLOON MAGISTRACY YESTERDAY, AS A MISUNDERSTANDING OR MISINTERPRETATION.

Sergeant Alexander said that enquiries showed that the accused, Wan Hon-ping, asked the constable to give him 70 cents for his fare from Shuyuchung to the country because he had only two cents and knew he would be re-banished.

Questioned by the Magistrate, accused agreed that he had only two cents when arrested.

He was sentenced to six months' hard labour for returning from banishment, and given $1 from the poor box to cover his fare after his imprisonment.

TELEPHONE COMPANY FORGERIES

TWO CHINESE WERE CHARGED BEFORE MR. G. T. LOWRY YESTERDAY WITH UTTERING FORGED DOCUMENTS, AND AIDING AND ABETTING.

Mok Pui-hang, 25, was charged with uttering a forged deposit receipt, purporting to be of the Hong Kong Telephone Company, and with demanding $100 from Lau Hon-hing by virtue of the forged receipt, with uttering another forged deposit receipt on November 14, and with possession of 14 forged deposit receipts of the Hong Kong Telephone Company.

Second defendant was charged with aiding and abetting on divers dates between November 1 and 14.

Defendants were remanded for 72 hours.

CHINA PRODUCTS EXHIBITION

It will be held on the vacant site opposite the Peninsula Hotel.

Japan Will Be Satisfied With Rest Of Orient and Australia

Prominent Admiral Makes Bold Statement Of Claim

A CALM DECLARATION BY ADMIRAL SANKICHI TAKAHASHI, FORMER JAPANESE SUPREME WAR COUNCILLOR, THAT JAPAN WILL IN DUE TIME PROCEED TO TAKE ALL OF THE ORIENT, PLUS AUSTRALIA, CAUSES NO WORRY IN WASHINGTON AND SOME AMUSEMENT.

One typical newspaper headline yesterday asked: "Is that all?"

Admiral Takahashi, writing in the "Hinode" magazine, defined the new order in Asia as beginning from Manchukuo and extending to Australia and westwards to the Bay of Bengal and Burma.

He said Japan would proceed by stages according to Japan's national strength and her sphere demands through Manchukuo, China, French Indo-China, Burma, the Straits Settlements, Netherlands East Indies, New Caledonia, New Guinea, many of the Pacific islands, the Philippines, Australia and the rest of the East Indies.

Admiral Takahashi also said that war with America will come —"there can be no settlement until Japan and America have had a showdown."

He added Japan was determined to face war with the United States, asking: "How could we have made the tripartite alliance without such a determination?"

He concluded by saying that the United States could avoid war by abandoning her "open door" policy and recognising Japan's "new order in Asia."

War Possibility

Admiral Takahashi's plain statement of Japan's dream of empire carries more conviction concerning Japan's true aims than the vacillating statements of politicians who alternately breathe sentiments of war and peace towards the United States.

If Japan's plans are as Admiral Takahashi outlines his inclusion of a fight with America becomes a possibility for there is plenty of evidence in Washington that the United States will not retreat from the position taken up regarding the Pacific status quo. There will be no retreat in the Far East.—Reuter.

ITALY'S PROBLEMS IN GREECE

Main comment in official circles in London yesterday on recent events of the war between Italy and Greece is to the effect that although Italy probably has an army of 200,000 to 250,000 engaged and stocks of food and ammunition she will be unable to conduct a major campaign in Greece unless able to keep her communications open.

It is significantly pointed out that Durazzo, the Albanian port which lately has been the object of Allied attentions, is said to handle 80% of the stores entering from Italy.

Regarding General Soddu's recent appointment as Italian C.-in-C. in the Greek theatre of war, it is noted he has divided his forces into two armies, one of which is commanded by General Vercellino, formerly commander of a mechanised army, and the other by General Geloso, one time G.O.C. in Albania.

Referring to claims in the Greek communique to the capture of cannons, military circles state these are probably in the Pindus area though operations have also been proceeding at Bilishit, east of Koritza, on Albanian soil.

Artillery Active

According to the Greek communique lively artillery and aerial activity continues at all points.

"Our airmen," it is added, "bombed enemy elements in action. In aerial combats our aviators brought down three enemy 'planes. Two of our machines have not returned to their base.

Enemy 'planes indiscriminately bombed towns and villages in the interior but failed to hit any military objective. A few people were injured." — British Wireless.

MANCHESTER NOVEMBER HANDICAP

After one of the gamest displays seen in a big race for a long time Lord Zetland's Beinn Dearg, ridden by Nevett, won the Manchester November Handicap yesterday, beating Major Cayzer's Longriggan by a short head.

Mrs. Corbett's Bellman was third, three lengths behind.

Beinn Dearg led almost the whole way until a furlong from home Longriggan went in front, but Beinn Dearg came again and won in the last few strides, covering 1½ miles in 2 minutes 42-3/5 seconds.

The betting was 9 to 1 against Beinn Dearg, 10 to 1 against Longriggan and 8 to 1 against Bellman. Last year's winner, Lord Roseberry's Tutor, the favourite at 4 to 1, failed to finish in the first nine. — Reuter.

TESTIMONY TO R.A.F.

LE HAVRE HAS HAD TO BE EVACUATED BY 7,000 GERMAN TROOPS AND THOUSANDS OF ITS FRENCH CITIZENS, OWING TO THE EFFECTIVENESS OF R.A.F. RAIDS, THE VICHY CORRESPONDENT OF THE "NEW YORK TIMES" DECLARED YESTERDAY.

Damage to property was extensive, the correspondent reported, one raid lasting five hours.

Oil tanks were destroyed and every barge between Rouen and Le Havre sunk or wrecked.—Reuter.

LEAFLETS DROPPED OVER DANZIG

The Ministry of Information revealed in London yesterday that during the recent R.A.F. raid on Danzig not only were military objectives bombed but leaflets dropped containing a message of encouragement to our Polish allies.—Reuter.

NOT FORGETTING "ARK ROYAL"

Soon after the British triumph at Taranto, Rome radio promised a statement on the operations and yesterday the Rome announcer claimed that Italy had sunk 59 British warships and damaged 78 others, Italian losses being 24 vessels sunk and one damaged!

The announcer added "When one considers that the Italian ships are operating in their own waters these figures are very reasonable and can be taken as correct."

No-one in London disputes that Italian warships are operating in their own waters, if spending most of the time in the comparative security of harbours can be called "operating."

London circles yesterday quoted a joke now popular in England and America that while the American Navy drinks whisky and the British Navy drinks rum the Italian Navy sticks to port!—Reuter.

THREE BATTLESHIPS DEFINITELY HIT

Attack Made 60 Feet Above Water

THE SENSATIONAL R.A.F. RAID ON TARANTO WAS CARRIED OUT IN TWO SEPARATE OPERATIONS, IT WAS REVEALED YESTERDAY TO A REUTER CORRESPONDENT BY THE CAPTAIN OF ONE OF THE BRITISH AIRCRAFT-CARRIERS FROM WHICH THE 'PLANES TOOK OFF.

The first operation was carried out by groups of 'planes which bombed the port of Taranto where many fires were started, and the second operation consisted of a wave of torpedo-carrying bombers.

Since the original operation two photographic flights over Taranto have revealed that all three of the Italian battleships were badly damaged.

One of the Cavour class appears to have been abandoned, another also of the Cavour class, the Italians were trying to salvage and also the Littorio type battleship which was heavily damaged.

The two cruisers and auxiliary ships hit were apparently sunk.

Keenness Of Crews

The 'plane was out on submarine patrol when it was forced down on the sea. The crew, picked up by a British cruiser, said: "You must hurry us back. We are bombing Taranto to-night and don't want to miss it."

The 'plane was struck off the list of machines taking part in the operation but the pilot and observer protested so strongly that after hasty repairs the bomber hopped off 15 minutes behind the others.

CHINESE MILITARY SUCCESS

Successful Chinese military operations on the Indo-Chinese border and in the Yamchow coastal area during the past week are confirmed by a Chungking telegram to the Chinese Embassy in London yesterday.

In Chekiang, following the shattering of the Japanese offensive in October, the Chinese have intensified pressure from Hsiaoshan.

DRURY LANE HIT BY BOMB

The Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, the oldest theatre in the world still in use as such, has been damaged in recent air raids.

Drury Lane, traditional home of spectacular productions and scene of many "Command Performances" attended by British Sovereigns, has come to be regarded as the National Theatre of Britain.

Since the outbreak of war it has been the headquarters of the organisation for entertainments for His Majesty's Forces.

It is also revealed that the Royal Mews at Buckingham Palace were damaged, this being the third time the Palace and its surroundings have been attacked by the enemy.—British Wireless.

GERMAN SHIPS SLIP OUT OF MEXICO

Four German merchantmen who have been in Tampico harbour, Mexico, since war began have left, apparently in an effort to reach Spanish ports.

Hongkew Terror Wave

THE WAVE OF TERRORISM IN THE JAPANESE-CONTROLLED AREA OF HONGKEW IN SHANGHAI CONTINUED UNABATED YESTERDAY WHEN A LONE CHINESE GUNMAN SHOT AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED SERGEANT-MAJOR MITSUGU TOMINAGA.

The gunman fired two shots at Tominaga, both bullets lodging in the Japanese soldier's abdomen. The victim's condition is pronounced extremely critical.

The Japanese authorities threw a cordon round the district and at present foreigners as well as Chinese are being prevented from entering and leaving the area.—Reuter.

SWEDEN EXTENDING HEALTH LAW

New sterilisation laws are to come into force in Sweden next year and are now being drafted by the Swedish Ministry of Justice. The existing laws cover sterilisation in cases of insanity and extreme mental deficiency.

The new laws, which will come into force in July, 1941, provide for sterilisation without consent for insanity and mental deficiency, like the present laws, and also for sterilisation of persons capable of giving valid approval to the operation.

Grounds for the operation include malignant diseases.

The new laws also provide for the sterilisation of women in case of grave illnesses, physical defects or weaknesses where it may be desirable to prevent gestation owing to its danger to life and health.

In general, the question will still be referred to the State Medical Board.—Reuter.

DAIREN'S TRADE DWINDLES

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Freight passing through Dairen is declining, the "Manchuria Daily News" announced yesterday. Freight unloaded in October totalled 550,900 tons and freight shipped to 493,816 tons, showing a decrease of 269,794 tons and 16,076 tons, respectively, compared with October last year. During October 360 ships called at the port, representing a drop of 233, while 227 left against 358 in October last year.—Havas.

SWEDISH PETROL SHORTAGE

The shortage of petrol in Sweden, caused by the blockade, has resulted in some dislocation in transport, but an effort is being made to overcome this by means of producer-gas, and the number of producer-gas vehicles in the country is increasing rapidly.

Whereas on September 15 there were about 5,000 vehicles in Sweden driven by producer-gas, this figure had risen to nearly 15,000 by November 1.

Two-thirds of these are lorries.—Reuter.

HOLD-UP CHARGES

LI CHING, 25, LI TSOI, 34, AND LI KA SIN, 31, WERE CHARGED BEFORE MR. G. T. LOWRY YESTERDAY WITH ROBBERY BY TWO OR MORE.

First and third were also charged with attempting to rob Ko Cheung-kwok in Tai Hang Road.

It was alleged that they attempted to rob Ko, a Star taxi driver, of his cash in the taxi, but were arrested by a Chinese Detective Sergeant, Lam Hon, who was on patrol.

Defendants were remanded for 72 hours.

Det. Serg. V. Morrison is in charge of the case.

TEN YEAR PLAN FOR CEMETERY

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Within the next 10 years all graves in cemeteries on the Island, except those in Happy Valley, are to be transferred to the new Wo Hop Shek cemetery in the New Territories, according to Government plans.

Chinese cemeteries on the Island will be closed from the beginning of next year when the Wo Hop Shek Cemetery will be officially opened.

This was learned last night by the "Sunday Herald," when it was also disclosed that most Chinese public bodies in Hong Kong are still opposed to the project.

Chinese leaders contend that the establishment of a cemetery in the New Territories is not in the interests of the majority of the Chinese population—the poorer classes who can ill-afford the additional expenditure which will be involved.

Government's arrangements for funerals will also not be in harmony with the traditional Chinese funeral procedure.

Aware of Government's determination to carry out the scheme Chinese leaders are now suggesting that Government should at least provide some means of relief for those who cannot afford the additional expenditure.

NEW BUDGET FOR MANCHURIA

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Domestic taxes will replace customs duties as an important source of revenue in Manchuria when the 1941 budget is adopted, according to the "Manchuria Daily News" yesterday.

Main reason for the decline in customs revenue is the strengthening of trade control between the yen bloc countries.

Since the foundation of Manchukuo the customs revenue has shown marked gains.

However, it began to drop from August and totalled only 12 million yuan in October, a decline of 50 per cent compared with the same month last year.—Havas.

CORRESPONDENCE

TOKEN OF GRATITUDE

Sir,—As I know that no work of charity is foreign to your paper, I beg of you to insert this letter.

I was a beneficiary of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul and entirely through the help of this Society I got through my education which afterwards enabled me to secure a handsome income, besides honourable and honorary posts in many clubs and associations in Hong Kong, but now owing to adversity, I can do no better than to forward $25, on the occasion of to-day's Bazaar, which I beg you will kindly hand to the St. Vincent de Paul Bazaar Committee.

I am sorry to see that world conditions force the Bazaar Committee to run the Bazaar on a smaller scale than those of the previous years; but I hope all philanthropic persons and former beneficiaries of the Society will come forward to help this worthy cause, because the Society is looking after the Hong Kong poor irrespective of creed and nationality.

Wishing the Bazaar every success.

A FORMER BENEFICIARY.

STOMACH PAIN

The sufferings of the poor lady on board ship were beyond belief. Of course no one can get whatever one asks when I was given morphia to ease the awful pain. I only have been near to getting relief with agony," writes Mr H. C. But relief was at hand. "Then I tried Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. After three or four doses I felt a change and slept soundly without drugs. I kept on with it, and improved continuously. My appetite came back and I amazed everyone who knew how ill I had been."

And every stomach sufferer who tries Maclean Brand Stomach Powder has the same story to tell. One spoonful will stop stomach pain—instantly—because Maclean Brand Stomach Power alkalizes burning stomach acid at once, soothes and corrects the irritated stomach walls, eventually clearing. PLANS FOR TWO HOSPITALS IN KOWLOON

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

SITES FOR TWO HOSPITALS in Kowloon — a new Government General Hospital and an Infectious Diseases Hospital — are in the process of formation, the erection of the second getting the preference owing to the urgent need of such an institution, the "Sunday Herald" learned authoritatively last night.

It is yet not possible to estimate the cost, but it may be recalled that an approximate estimate of $1,900,000 was given in the report of the Technical Committee for the Reorganisation and Improvement of Hospitals and Clinics in Hong Kong.

The new proposed General Hospital will accommodate between 500 and 600 beds while the Infectious Diseases Hospital will contain at least 240 beds with means of expansion to accommodate double that number.

Both Kowloon and New Territories residents have suffered from the inadequacy of hospital facilities in Kowloon but it is now authoritatively learned that the site for one new hospital is in the process of formation. It is located behind the existing hospital buildings in the Kowloon Medical Centre and should be completed before the end of the year.

Near Kowloon Hospital

In addition to the new general hospital, Government intends also to build a new Infectious Diseases Hospital on a lower level at the Kowloon Medical Centre.

The site for this building is between the present hospital buildings and the Chinese Soldiers' Internment Camp.

When this hospital is completed it will no longer be necessary to use the upper Hospital at Laichikok for infectious diseases. This will become available as an extension to the Laichikok Relief Hospital thus assisting in overcoming, in part, the grave congestion existing in the Tung Wah Hospital.

The Infectious Diseases Hospital being most urgently needed, its construction will probably be given the preference.

The Man's Drink That Women Appreciate

As the fame of that imperial cocktail, Gin and Rose's Lime Juice, spread from East of Suez to the West End of London, it was not the menfolk alone who gave the orders.

Somehow their wives and daughters had discovered that this drink, above others, was one to keep figures slender.

CANTON RIVER SERVICE

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

While nothing has yet been fixed by the agents of the s.s. Fatshan for resuming service between Hong Kong and Canton, following re-opening of the Pearl River, the Japanese vessel, the m.s. Shiragane Maru, is scheduled to arrive in Hong Kong from Canton on Wednesday.

According to Mr. Okazaki, Japanese Consul-General, the position is as last week. The restrictions imposed on ships between Canton and Hong Kong have not been modified or lifted.

The manager of the O.S.K. told the "Sunday Herald" that, according to information from Canton, the Shiragane Maru will sail from Canton and arrive here on Wednesday. The ship will return to Canton the following day.

Fatshan Not Sailing

Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, agents for the Fatshan, indicated that there is little hope of the Fatshan resuming the service while the restrictions are enforced.

At least one of them is of a prohibitive nature. No ship is allowed to carry more than 100 passengers. It is pointed out that the receipts from 100 passengers would at the most bring in $1,000 compared with the expenditure of at least $3,000 for a single trip.

Crowd In Happy Valley Watches Roof drama

DRAMATICS, STAGED BY A WOULD-BE SUICIDE, WHO EVENTUALLY JUMPED AND WAS SEVERELY INJURED, ATTRACTED A HUGE CROWD TO THE YICK YAM STREET DISTRICT IN HAPPY VALLEY ON FRIDAY.

The scene was reminiscent of that in New York a year or two ago when an American youth climbed out on the ledge of a building and stayed there for hours before he jumped to his death.

The Hong Kong suicide exhibitionist was Chu Wai-kan, 23 years of age and out of work, who apparently decided that he would have an audience for his attempt, and worked himself to the edge of the roof of No. 49 Yick Yam Street, with his legs dangling over the side.

Eventually, he jumped and was picked up with injuries to hands, face and head and was taken off to the Queen Mary Hospital.

Attention was attracted to the "drama," when two friends of Chu were seen on the roof, trying to pull him back and to dissuade him from making his death-leap.

Large Crowd Gathers

In a short time, a large crowd had collected in the street.

Cars and taxis pulled up and the passengers got out to watch the man on the roof. His friends kept trying to pull him back.

After a time, they relaxed in their efforts for a second. That apparently was all that Chu was waiting for and without further ado he made the leap.

There was a sickening thud and Chu, in a heap, was picked up by an ambulance which had been summoned to the scene and driven awhy to the hospital.

Among passengers who boarded a C.N.A.C. airliner for Chungking on Friday was Mr. Lai Moong, M.A., former managing editor of the "Chu Kong Yat Pao" (Pearl River Daily), which suspended publication a month ago in Hong Kong.

Worse Than A Crime . . . .

By The Very Rev. W. R. INGE, D.D.

DR. William Brown, who, since the death of Professor William McDougall, is probably our leading psychologist, has sent me his book on psychological methods of healing. The most interesting part of it, to most people, will be the account of his wonderful success in the treatment of shell-shock and similar nervous disorders in the Great War. Few men have done more to heal the wounds of that terrible episode in our history.

I have long been interested in the claims of spiritual healers, about which I am perhaps unduly sceptical. Dr. Brown is not inclined to set limits to the influence of mind over body, he does not think that a hard line can be drawn between functional and organic disease. We must not split up a unitary organism into different faculties. Or suppose that mind and body are even independent of each other.

Personally I am surprised at the respectful language which he uses about Freud. I agree with the late J. W. N. Sullivan, who, in his little book, "The Tyranny of Science," says: "I believe that Freud's form of psycho-analysis is really as silly as it looks. It is the name of science that secures for these theories such attention as they get from intelligent people who are not cranks."

The Œdipus complex is surely a nasty delusion, and I entirely refuse to believe that my dreams are any indication of my subconscious character.

* * *

This, however, is not the subject of the present article. There are a few pages at the end of the book in which he surveys the present state of European politics from the point of view of a psychologist.

The group-mind must not be regarded as a mystical entity apart from the individuals who compose the group. We must not personify the State as a super-individual, or a god to whom all the citizens may be offered in sacrifice; nor must we personify Germany, Italy or Japan as female figures with mostly undesirable qualities. But it is true that persons acting as members of a group behave very differently, sometimes better, more often much worse, than they would do as isolated individuals.

"Unfortunately, when individuals get together in a group under a leader, with reference to some particular policy or programme, the identification which takes place may have the effect of cancelling for the time being the higher mental powers which distinguish one person from another, leaving only the primitive instinctive tendencies. People acting in such a group act in a more primitive way than they would otherwise do. They are fickle, shallow, and impulsive, and although for that reason often ineffective, at times they can produce momentarily overwhelming results."

Such groups within a nation may not be very serious, but when a feeling of crude nationalism is aroused and whipped up by the leaders we have a regression to a more primitive attitude towards life, which may be disastrous.

"That the extreme nationalist movement is regressive is obvious. It is because I am a psychologist that I have felt so unhappy about the attitude of the other nations towards the defeated Powers. We have been too slow in meeting our adversaries. We postponed any action to alleviate difficulties till it was too late."

* * *

Nationalism develops in poverty-sticken States of a belligerent type. Their natural pugnacity and national pride are intensified. Instead of living freely under the law, they place themselves deliberately under a dictator, who is never a man with wide liberal views. A dictator is never a liberal. Liberalism produces leaders who are men of peace, not men of war.

The same anti-liberal urge which produces militant nationalism is the moving force, according to Dr. Brown, in collectivism. Both violate the famous maxim of Kant, "Treat everyone as an end and never merely as a means."

Collectivism and nationalism both treat everyone as means to an end, the aggrandisement of a State or of an international system. That is a step back to a more primitive type. The whole tendency of Christianity, and of civilisations based upon it, has been towards the recognition of the inalienable rights of the individual and the sacredness of human personality. These are disregarded and often explicitly denied in the totalitarian States.

It is because the free nations have never risen to the height of their convictions, because they have not realised that freedom demands voluntary discipline and self-sacrifice, that the more primitive and essentially inferior types of organisation seem by comparison so much more efficient.

Hence the real danger which threatens to overwhelm popular government wherever it still exists. If we are to remain free, we must be masters of ourselves. A nation that does not deserve freedom will soon lose it.

* * *

Dr. Brown's indictment of the conduct of the Allies after the War must be admitted. We were very unlucky in our representatives. Paris was the last city in which the Conferences after the Armistice ought to have been held. Clemenceau, "the tiger," dominated the situation. National passions had been stimulated to frenzy.

Take two examples only. I believe it is certain that both Masaryk and Benes advocated the cession of the Sudeten-German area to Germany, but France and England objected to giving anything to the vanquished. King George V., as I know from a private source, expressed a hope that we should annex no territory after the War. How much wiser we should have been to follow his advice!

For some years after the War the Germans were in a subdued and almost penitent mood. We ought to have done everything to support the Weimar Republic, which stood for peace and reconciliation. Instead of doing so, we allowed the nation to seethe under a sense of injustice and humiliation, until the worst passions of the old Germany revived and produced the results which we see.

* * *

Could we have acted otherwise? Certainly we could if we had been better led. A hundred and twenty years ago the same problem presented itself, and was very differently handled. Our affairs were then in the hands of two men, Wellington and Castlereagh.

Wellington has been often misunderstood. He was a very great general who hated war and violence, and cared little for military glory: When a stranger helped him across the street, and said what a high honour it was to him to have been of use to the victor of Waterloo, the Iron Duke replied: "Don't be a d——d fool!"

As for Castlereagh, that much-maligned statesman, was there ever a more statesmanlike utterance than his letter to the Prime Minister, Lord Liverpool, who was in favour of harsher measures towards defeated France?

"It is not our business to collect trophies, but to bring back the world to peaceful habits. The more I reflect upon it, the more I deprecate this system of scratching such a Power [as France]. We may hold her down and pare her nails so that many years shall pass away before she can again wound us.

"But this system of being pledged to a Continental war for objects that France may one day reclaim from the particular States that hold them, without pushing her demands beyond what she would contend was due to her own honour, is, I am sure, bad British policy."

* * *

If we had had Castlereagh and Wellington at Versailles, there would probably be no Hitler now. Perhaps Europe never committed a more expensive mistake than the Peace of Versailles. And, as Dr. Brown says, the remedy is a study of group-psychology.

* * *

I SAID the other day, in writing about the Jews, that the German political slogan of race and blood is unscientific balderdash, since there are no pure races. Even the Jews, who have been estranged from their neighbours in their adopted countries by religion and by persecution, are very much mixed, and the Germans are not even predominantly Nordic.

The greatest advances in civilisation have been made by the fusion of two cultures. The ancient Greeks are one example; the Christian Church is another.

Opinions differ as to whether mixed marriages are desirable. The children often start with a disadvantage, like the Eurasians (now rather absurdly called Anglo-Indians) in India, and the mulattoes in North America. On the other hand, the beauty of the quadroons (one-quarter negro) used to be celebrated, and some experts speak of "hybrid vigour." The theory is that for one or two generations the offspring of miscegenation is more energetic than either of the parents.

* * *

The general opinion is that while the eugenist would look with approval on the marriage of an Englishman and an Italian, or a German and a Jew, the mixture of two very different racial types, such as the European and the negro, Mongolian, or aboriginal Australian, should not be encouraged.

The most extraordinary melting-pot in the world is Hawaii, where the natives of the Sandwich Islands mate with whites of every nation, and with Chinese and Japanese. The results, judging from photographs, are decidedly pleasing; but the Polynesians, wherever they came from, are not very unlike Europeans.

The children of white New Zealanders and Maoris are splendid men physically, as we saw when a team of athletes, most of them half-breeds, visited this country.

But the refugees whom we have always welcomed to our shores have belonged to kindred stocks, and if we can find room for them there is not the smallest reason why we should not receive them. Even the Jews, who are sometimes, by no means always, recognisable as aliens, make good citizen. They seldom come on the rates, and many of them have won distinction in science, literature and administration, as well as in commerce.

* * *

Our island has been successfully invaded again and again. The Celts, who contrary to the usual opinion, were akin to the Teutons, mingled with the dark "Mediterranean" people whom they found in possession. The Romans left very few traces of Italian blood. The Roman armies under the empire were not made up of Italians, the legions quartered in Britain sometimes came from Spain; the men doubtless took British wives.

The Saxon and Danish conquests were a very different affair; there was a real displacement of population; probably the majority of the Britons were killed or driven off by the English, who in their turn had reason to pray, "From the fury of the Northmen, good Lord deliver us."

The Normans, a blend of Scandinavians and Gauls, were a very fine race, but William's army brought very few women, and the "Norman blood" of which Tennyson speaks was very much diluted.

Since then there has been no hostile immigration, though some Cornishmen, oddly enough, like to imagine that the shipwrecked sailors of the Spanish Armada found favour with Cornish girls. In point of fact, they were given no opportunity of displaying their seductive manners.

But there has been friendly immigration on a fairly large scale, and we have profited greatly by it. Henry I. imported colonies of Flemish weavers, who taught our people to make the coarse woollen cloth called frieze, and Edward III. brought in more of them. Honesty compels me to add that in 1381 the mob who murdered the Archbishop of Canterbury and sacked John of Gaunt's London palace, massacred all the Flemish weavers whom they could find.

The great influx of French Huguenots after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes is well known. Men who are willing to go into banishment for their religious opinions are likely to have unusual strength of character, and there can be no doubt that Louis XIV. expelled some of the best of his subjects. Books have been written about the after history of the Huguenot families. It is an astonishing record.

* * *

The victims of Hitler's persecution seem to be mainly intellectuals. There are said to be over three hundred foreign scientists now in the British Empire, most of them in England. Five of them are Nobel prizemen for science.

Care must be taken not to reveal the identity of these eminent men, some of whom probably have relatives who might come under the lash of the secret police in Germany. But it is said that they include at least one leader in cancer research, and one who helped Germany during the war by discovering how to extract nitrogen from the atmosphere.

Another, not a German, I think, has studied the migrations of fish. Another has advanced the processes of making synthetic rubber and sugar. Another is associated with the new discover of "heavy water," from which great things are expected by scientific chemists.

Such a galaxy of imported talent ought to give our country the first place in experimental science. That these men are grateful to their hosts, and eager to do their best for the country that has welcomed them, need not be doubted. The greatest of them all, Einstein, has found refuge in America.

* * *

Is there such a thing as collective insanity? I am utterly bewildered by the orgy of callous cruelty and senseless persecution which has broken out since the war, in Russia, Spain, Germany and other countries. I must leave it to wiser men to find a rational explanation of it all; I do not understand it.

At any rate there is no doubt about the facts. The horrors that are going on are worse than anything that has appeared in print. Innocent people are being murdered every day by the secret police, and torture is regularly applied in the concentration camps. The relief of the poor victims who have escaped from this inferno is piteous to see.

Can we say that such a state of things is too bad to last? The average citizen of a totalitarian State is a decent enough fellow, certainly not a cruel monster. True enough; but he cannot call his soul his own. There is no escape from modern tyranny.

The fatal objection to State Socialism or State Capitalism (they are the same thing) is that it makes the Government omnipotent. Every man's life, liberty and livelihood are at the mercy of some official. As Herbert Spencer said, "Socialism will mean slavery, and the slavery will not be mild." The Government may or may not wish to relax the reign of terror, but does not dare to do it.

As the Chinese proverb says, "He who rides on a tiger can never dismount." Many Germans wished for war as their only chance of deliverance.

"SHE NEEDS A LONG-LASTING DEODORANT one that neither bath nor exercise can render ineffective. . . ."

YOU may think you do not perspire enough to matter, but every girl does. Even slight moisture may ruin a lovely dress, —will certainly destroy your charm.

Thousands of women rely on Liquid Odorono to safeguard their feminine appeal. Used and recommended by doctors, Odorono simply diverts underarm perspiration to other parts of the body where it may evaporate more freely. Easy to use, it scientifically controls perspiration moisture and odour.

Mainly about People

"Dorothy Lamour"

THE happy throng that filled the Peninsula Hotel last Saturday eve were pleasantly thrilled when it was announced that "Miss Dorothy Lamour" would appear in person to "ker-roon" some of her most popular songs. As the picture on this page will show, they had reason to sit up, startled, when the lovely, lithesome actress herself appeared before their very eyes — at least, for the first moment or two, it really looked as if Miss Lamour had flown across the Pacific in less time than it takes to shoot down a Messerschmidt, just for the occasion.

* * *

OF course, it was not really Dorothy Lamour—but, as Charles Lamb, that inveterate punster, might have said, what's sarong with pretending? Actually, it was a clever combination of make-up and mimicry by as delightful a Chinese lassie as one could hope to find in town, Miss Vollet Soo. The occasion was a variety show and dance put on in aid of the Hong Kong Students' Relief Association, and Miss Soo's contribution to the programme consisted of two of Miss Lamour's most popular songs, "Moonlight and Shadows," which she sang in English, and "Lovelight and Starlight," which she sang in Malayan.

* * *

WE wish we could tell you more about Miss Soo, but she was as hard to locate as an Italian warship in the Mediterranean — and unfortunately she does not live at a place called Taranto. She positively refused to be interviewed, and beyond the fact, that she is a pretty good swimmer, we were unable to beg, borrow or steal sufficient material for a potted biography. Her make-up last Saturday night was, of course, by Victor Mamak. He did it at only eight hours' notice, too!

Old Cow-Hands

SIR Walter Gilbey would have held up his hands in horror had he been at Fanling last weekend, but any old cow-hands in those here parts would have felt right at home, yes sirree! had they been around when the Cottage Club turned out in almost full force for a "Wild West Party." True, the folks came in all sorts of rig from top-boots to no boots at all, but, at least, if they weren't "Wild West" costumes they were wearing, at any rate they were colourful. Some folks came as cow-punchers and cow-girls, the rest let their imaginations run riot. Even the Fakir of Ipi was represented by a gentlemen in a "North-West Frontier" costume, who sat his horse as if born on it.

* * *

DESPITE wars, evacuations and other set-backs, the Cottage Club is one Club in the Colony which has been going ahead of late and has provided its members with many an opportunity for healthy fun and recreation in the open air and equally open spaces. Last Saturday's party was a typical Cottage Club affair, and the merry bunch of 25 men and women who turned out were favoured with a fine afternoon "with Nature smiling on every side." Operative 34 ("Follow this Man") reports that some of the spectators smiled too — but why bring that up?

* * *

AFTER a slow start across the paddy, the cavalcade got in some fast galloping over the grasslands, and here we regret to say there was one casualty. A well-known rugger player dismounted from his horse a durn sight faster than he had originally got on it — but he was back in the saddle again and away before you could raise an eyebrow. On through the village of Hok Tau and across the Shautaukok road above Kwanti Race Course they went, fording the River Ganges (or was it the Amazon?) en route. After some more good running, the party checked on "the gallops" to give their panting steeds a breather (and some of the riders, too.) Then Westward Ho! to Lo Shui Ling and on to "Green Pastures," where the more speedy members had a chance to do their stuff once more in real "Cowboy Film" style.

* * *

A final check, a feed of grass (for the horses; Nebuchadnezzar was unable to be present) and the cavalcade turned homeward. They went over "High Pass" and the River Indus to come out back of the "Hunter's Arms," and thence to the Cottage Club, where a barbecue was awaiting them.

* * *

THE barbecue had been prepared by that Prince of Chefs, Mr. G. P. Murphy, than whom, so report has it, there is no better cook in South China, and who would be a credit to any chuck-wagon in Arizony or "South of the Border." At his elbow was his Charming Lady Assistant, who is considered one of the best riders in the Club but was unable to ride the range that afternoon because she had put her knee out the week before while indulging in that most dangerous sport, yachting.

* * *

AS usual with a Cottage Club evening, there was eating and drinking and all kinds of merriment, with Mr. "Spud" Spary fairly making the piano-keys jingle themselves out of the frame. According to Operative 34, "there were singers that could sing and singers that couldn't" but they enjoyed themselves, which is, after all, the main thing about a sing-song. The Cottage Club Choir, or Glee Chorus, was led by Mr. Jock Fraser, the genial president, in the singing of "I'll Give You One-O," all the way up to "Twelve-O," and a more or less tuneful rendering of that old favourite "We'll all go a-huntin' to-day" — apparently sung retrospectively.

* * *

AS dusk fell, camp fires dotted the lawn and here and there little groups squatted and cooked their meals "real Western fashion," sustaining themselves in Miraculous fashion even if some of the fat fell into the fire instead of remaining where it was put. More music, more songs, a few impromptu dances and then it was time to go home.

* * *

AMONG those present were Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Harmon, G. H. Bond, Mary Smalley, Beryl Fair, Jill Beavis, "Kiki" de Chaffoy de Courcelles, Mr. and Mrs. "Spud" Spary, Dr. and Mrs. Hackett, Mrs. "Penny" Guerin, Bill Schnable (and two charming lady friends), Mrs. Christine Wyatt, John Eager, Paul Calderara, Frank Bohdfield, Mr. Van Damm, Paddy O'Neill, Jimmy Kelly (and a group of friends), Bill Hitchins, Jack Corkett, Jock Fraser, Captain A. G. Atkinson, Major Penfold, Bill O'Neill, Fred Bradley, Bert Smith, A. Treverton, J. Gunner, J. R. Stephen and party, Peter Wong (and family, and friends), Dr. E. W. Stout (and friends), Jock Logan, A. S. Rogers, C. T. Robertson, G. P. Murphy, and many more.

Police Reserve

A DOZEN disciplined men can control an undisciplined mob of a thousand or more, said Lieutenant-General E. F. Norton when, in his capacity of Acting Governor, he inspected the Police Reserve on Wednesday, and if the turn-out and appearance of the men on parade is any criterion, the Hong Kong Police Reserve can be counted on to tackle any emergency with efficiency and promptness. The man in the street may not realise the amount of work these police reservists do, for a regular policeman and a reservist look alike to him.

* * *

BUT all the year round, the 900 men of Hong Kong's reserve carry out their duties without fuss and publicity. About 180 were on duty regularly at night last year, as His Excellency pointed out, and last July a very large number was called out for both day and night duty. During black-out practices, the whole of the Reserve is out on duty.

* * *

MEMBERSHIP in the Reserve is open to Europeans, Indians and Chinese, and there has been a steady increase on its rolls. A year ago, it was just over 300 strong; it was then increased to 415 and in July this year it was decided to raise the figure again to a thousand-odd. Only a short while ago, His Excellency raised its membership yet again, this time to 1,502. At the moment, there are just over 930 men on the rolls, so if anyone would like to fill one of the 570 vacancies, he knows what he can do about it.

Gen. Metaxas

AT the head of the Greek nation putting up such a valiant fight against the Italians are King George II and General Metaxas, the latter "Prime Minister for life." Up till a short while ago, they were, so to speak, in opposite camps, for whereas the King is pro-English, Metaxas was a Germanophile. Born in 1871 on the island of Cephantonia, Joannis Metaxas studied at the Berlin Military College, where he acquired a preference for German life and culture. Indeed, in 1917, he opposed Greece's entry into the war on the Allied side.

* * *

AFTER being exiled, he returned to Greece in 1920, and was active as a monarchist during the somewhat tumultous days of the republic, and indeed helped King George II to the throne in April, 1935. A year later, General Metaxas was made premier. Four months later, the Government, fearing a Communist uprising, proclaimed martial law, suspended part of the Constitution, dissolved the Chamber, and set up a dictatorship under General Metaxas. A new Cabinet was appointed, and in 1938 Metaxas was made "Premier for life."

* * *

GREECE has been in a somewhat difficult position, as, prior to the war, Germany acquired 35 per cent of her foreign trade and this, with General Metaxas's somewhat natural German tastes, made for increased German influence. This, however, was offset by the very large pro-British party in Athens, headed by none other than the King himself. On the outbreak of the war, Greece adopted a neutral attitude—but, as usual, that did not prevent the Axis from trying to march in when it suited their purpose.

A Dream

TO intrude a personal note, the other night, after hearing of the gallant action of the Jervis Bay against overwhelming odds, we went to bed wishing that these merchant cruisers had something more in the way of a "brick in their glove" to offer against enemy warships than a few 4-inch guns and no armour-plating, and that the spirit of the men of the Rawalpindi and Jervis Bay be honoured by giving their comrades something more of a fighting chance against a fixed pack of cards. That night we dreamed a dream.

* * *

WE are not naval experts, and so those who are have full permission to laugh at us. But occasionally a layman's idea contains a germ which incubates in the brain of the specialist and develops into a sound scheme. So, here goes: We found ourselves on the bridge of a merchant cruiser protecting a convoy. Suddenly, in the distance, up loomed an enemy raider. As the merchant cruiser turned to give battle and the convoy split up and fled, we saw a small motor-boat, something like one of the M.T.B.s, put over the side and a small crew jump into her. In a moment or two, the motor-boat was off, speeding towards the raider in real M.T.B. style. To us on the merchant cruiser, amid the whines and crashes of falling shells, came the sound of an explosion as a torpedo fired from the motor-boat struck the enemy warship at close range; and she began to sink.

* * *

THEN, of course, we woke up, to hear a motor-car racing its engine outside our window. Rather a foolish idea, what? But is it entirely so? Motor torpedo-boats of this size need not be as costly or as intricate as the normal type one sees. They need have only a limited range, even a comparatively short life. Merchant cruisers might be adapted to carry one, or even two, with special apparatus to launch them quickly in almost any kind of a sea. With their small size and high speed, they might well be able to get within range of the enemy ship, fire off their torpedoes and race "home to mother" to be taken on board again. (Yeah, we know—"another crackpot inventor!")

Japanese Viewpoint

FEW people realise that, in addition to the British-owned English-language newspapers published in Hong Kong, there is also one published by the Japanese under the name of the "Hong Kong News." Others have heard of it, but not seen an actual copy. It is an odd newspaper—odd because it does not contain a single advertisement, and advertisements are, after all, what normally pay the cost of printing, paper, staff salaries, etc. Its offices overlook the Naval Dockyard.

* * *

WE thought local residents might be interested to read a line or two from the paper's editorial last Sunday on President Roosevelt's victory. According to this Japanese paper published in Hong Kong, "the re-election of Roosevelt shows American weakness in mind and character." Well, some Americans we've met did appear a little crazy, but we'd hesitate to go as far as the "Hong Kong News"! It ends its leader with the following note:— ". . . should America under Roosevelt continue the challenging attitude toward Japan, there will be no room left for her (our italics). The Japanese people are compelled to renew their determination and preparedness to meet this anticipated worsening of relations."

* * *

Remarkable Remarks

STRANGE things people say and write sometimes. And the people back home are the more remarkable remarks of comparatively recent date, as they actually appeared in the press:—

"I do not know whether you are a knave or a fool, if you thought you were going to corrupt a police officer with a paltry £5," said Mr. Herbert Metcalfe, the magistrate.—London "Daily Telegraph."

3. Page 32. Section 28, paragraph 3, line 6.—For, "get out of it at once"; substitute, "Avoid it if the tactical situation admits."—"Infantry Training."

And to make herself look even more glamorous than she already is, she had three white kittens playing on her table.—"Daily Mirror."

Can anyone recommend school, boy 14, where reincarnation is accepted and astrology understood?—Advertisement in "Daily Telegraph."

As a woman and lover of cats, I would like to endorse Mr. Nichols's statement that cats can teach women everything. Everything, that is but the one thing cats do not possess—a sense of loyalty to their mates.—Letter in the "Daily Sketch."

Blackout. Carry a white Pekinese.—Advertisement in the "Daily Telegraph."

HONG KONG'S "DOROTHY LAMOUR"

Thought For The Week

DURING the week, glancing over back copies of that magazine among magazines, the "Reader's Digest," we came across the following extract from the writings of Mary Roberts Rinehart, one which moved us strangely and, as the French put it, gave us to think. Wonder what you think of it?

* * *

"THE happy people of this world are never free. It is only youth which really wants freedom, or those who have set up a defensive mechanism against life, since to live is also to suffer. The older and wiser know that nothing is of value unless it can be shared; and that the eternal cry of the human heart is to belong to someone else. It is its escape from loneliness, its support in weakness, a solace to its pride. Even youth should think twice before it asks for freedom. Surely to be happy is better than to be free; and to be kind to all, to like many and love a few, to be needed and wanted by those we love, is certainly the nearest we can come to happiness."

SINCERE'S

PATCHES Are SO Patriotic

THE attention of the Director of the Department for the Maintenance of the National Morale (Mr. Yaffle) has been drawn to further appeals to the nation to conserve in clothes.

He recalls the recent observation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that shabby clothes would soon be acknowledged as a mark of a patriot, and the comment of a newspaper that "Patches are Patriotic."

Needless to say (said Mr. Yaffle, interviewing himself), such remarks are tending to make shabbiness fashionable and patches the Latest Thing.

Nevertheless, I realise that to those who, like myself, are accustomed in the interests of national culture to maintaining a certain standard in dress, this injunction to wear patched clothes will come as a grim reminder of the horrors of modern war.

A patch, you will say, may be the mark of a patriot, but can it be the mark of a gentleman? We may be fighting for democracy, but if the masses cannot distinguish their betters at a glance, what becomes of the national morale?

Now, it is true that a real gentleman will always look like one, whatever he wears. There is something about some of us that can only be defined as a certain indefinable something and although you cannot describe it, you can always raise your hat or throw a brick at it.

Few of your, however, will have achieved that degree of superiority over the common ruck. Your gentility is not dyed so deeply into the wool as to be independent of outward forms and accessories. Upon such, therefore, I would impress one essential and paramount rule:

See that you put your patches only upon suits of perfect cut, which bear a reputable maker's name.

After all, a patch upon a Saville Row product is not like a patch upon a Courage Brothers ready-made, and never will be, while There's Still an England. (Later: News has reached me of one patriot who, in order to ensure public recognition of the original distinctive quality of his patched suit, has been seen wearing the name of a Saville Row tailor on the outside of the collar. I need hardly say that this savours of ostentation and borders upon vulgarity. (It is not cricket: I doubt if it is even Soccer).

For ladies, I admit, the matter is not so simple. Styles change rapidly, and by the time a garment is old enough to patch it is demodee, and no self-respecting woman would be seen bombed in it.

"Can we not be patriotic without being out of date?" That is the heart-cry that oozes up through the sticky slime on every fashionable woman's lips.

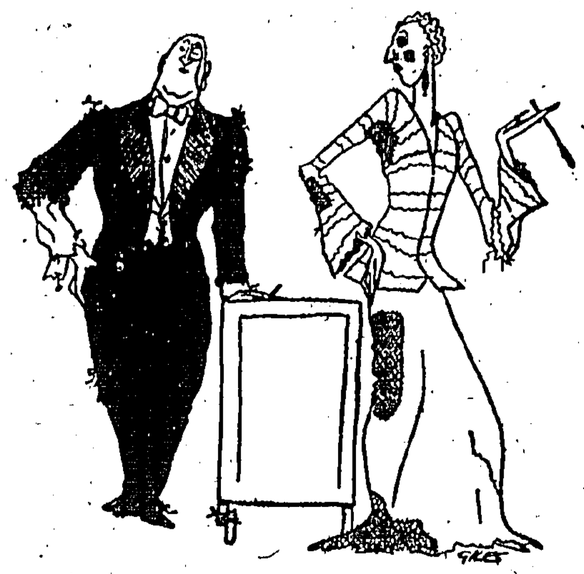
They can. To meet the situation, otherwise desperate, the House of Yaffle is now offering a wide range of Autumn Models WITH THE PATCHES ALREADY ON.

Always the first to strike the seasonable note, Yaffle's have turned the new Poverty Mode to good account by creating a new and irresistible chic. Every patch is of the finest quality fabric—man-tailored, of course—and chosen with that unerring flair for tone-blending which has made the House of Yaffle, world-famous.

(There's Glamour in a Yaffle Patch).

The Yaffle Patch Models, needless to say, have all the new features—the bloused back, the slurred yoke, the crease-resisting pleats, the wide, witte sleeves—all are there, Plus the Patriotic Patch.

Your coats, your suits, your ensembles, for town and country wear; your lovely flowing evening gowns, your dainty diaphanous nighties, your oh-how-wicked little cocktail coats — Yaffle patches give to all garments a new touch of tone, ligne, and esprit, to say nothing of dernier cri, Oh-la-la and brouhaha. Lovely and lasting are the Yaffle Patch Models, and their beauty and distinction belie their modest prices.



BY YAFFLE

(She Thought Romance Had Passed Her By, Till She Wore a Yaffle Patch).

★

Having said all this, we realise that the matter is by no means settled. It is not the clothes alone that make the woman, and in offering their high-class creations to the feminine monde, the House of Yaffle never fails to remember that every fashionable woman is slightly cretinous.

It is hardly necessary, therefore, for us to point out that the make-up should be carefully designed to harmonise with the Patch Motif.

Harmony is more than ever necessary in wartime, as much to preserve the aesthetic standards of our civilisation as to symbolise the essential unity of our National Ensemble. And you might spoil the whole effect of a costume by making the wrong-coloured mess on your silly little pan.

For example, with the smart little wrap in scum-green, with off-maroon patches illustrated on Page 13, you need a rich, dark make-up. We prescribe dark-medium rouge, ox-liver lip-stick, bruise-blue iridescent eye-shadow, Madelaine mascara and brick-dust powder. Or, again, with the pigwash yellow and peacock creation on Page 14, a clear, gay maquillage is needed. We recommend—but we need not continue. In any case, we are now feeling a little sick. Follow our charts and you can't go wrong.

Every colour-scheme is carefully composed in the Yaffle studios by our own highly trained staff of make-up artists, every one of whom has a foreign name and very thin legs, and each is the result of weeks of concentrated thought.

And it only remains to add that it's all for England.

Murder, Sabotage . . The Inside Story Of A Fifth Column That Shocked All America

Big-Boss SPIES

THE widespread Fifth Column campaign and sabotage plots which have just been unearthed in the United States were organised by Otto Abetz, who is now Gauleiter of Paris.

Abetz, 38 years old, most valuable of German agents, was the man behind the espionage system which has shocked the Americans.

He was nearly caught by G-men when engaged on his American mission, but the Germans actually murdered another of their own agents to distract the Federal police attentions from Otto Abetz, who got safely back to Hamburg.

* * *

That—for the first time—is the real truth behind the murder of Dr. Walter Engelberg, chief secretary to Hans Borchers, Nazi Consul-General in New York.

He was found murdered in his pyjamas, his skull crushed in. That killing was deliberately staged by other New York Nazis to cover their own tracks.

So quickly did G-man Hoover, who [illegible] immediately from Washington, was unable to secure a conviction. That murder was planned with all the ruthlessness of a Nazi [illegible] coup. And now Otto Abetz, the man really responsible, has been appointed "German Ambassador to France," and is Gauleiter of Paris.

Otto came to see me at the Buckingham Elevation just before he started for New York.

"I've got to do two years' work in less than two months," he told me.

"We've got to reorganise the whole active section of Yorkville" (New York's "Little Fatherland" on Manhattan's upper East Side) "as the hot-headed fools there are just wasting their time beating up the Jews in neighbouring districts of Brooklyn.

"I've got orders from Berlin to stop all that public display. We want real results—not toy-soldier pogroms. For months I've been trying to get our Brooklyn man, Engelberg, to find out vital details of the new autogiro 'planes being tested now by the Platt-Lepage Corporation . . . and my other agents tell me that all the fool Engelberg does is to get mixed up in the pornographic literature business, because he cables back that this takes him into a very 'susceptible' strata of New York Society."

* * *

At that time Nazi Fifth Column work in America was costing over £10,000 a week.

There were some 300 men and women on the pay-roll, and swanky offices in Yorkville and in the business heart of New York ate up £2,000 a week.

In addition there were generous payments to agents as widely spread as Detroit (tanks and cars), Los Angeles (Lockheed 'planes and Allison aero engines) and Panama.

This was entirely a spy set-up. It had no connection with the barter and propaganda work which the Germans were doing in Brazil and other South American States.

The trouble was that we often pulled a fast piece of work in Brazil on a barter system that saved us, perhaps, £10,000 . . . only to find that just that sum had been spent in New York in one week for espionage that was not getting results.

Otto Abetz went to New York to get results. One of those results was to be the stealing of designs for autogiro 'planes for use in an invasion of Britain! "Rotorplanes"—made from designs stolen in America—were actually used in the invasion of Belgium.

Before he died, Juan de la Cierva, the autogiro inventor, sold his American rights to the Pitcairn Autogiro Company; the United States Army, in addition, made a grant of over £50,000 to the Platt-Lepage Corporation, of Eddystone, Pennsylvania, for development a reconnaissance 'plane that can remain poised in the air and take-off with no forward run at all.

Igor Sikorsky, ex-Russian 'plane inventor, has also been given a U.S. Army grant to develop autogiros through the Vought-Sikorsky division of the United Aircraft Corporation . . . and, all told, the U.S. House of Representatives have granted £200,000 to autogiro development.

* * *

It is no secret that Messerschmitt, Vendt and our other German 'plane scientists have been overworked producing fast fighters and statosphere-flying bombers. So there was every reason to attempt a "pinch" of the U.S. plans.

Plant was set up in the Bavarian Aircraft Company for mass-producing these "invasion 'planes" immediately the blueprints were smuggled back via Brazil from New York.

Von Empschen, one of the Deutsche-Lufthansa "crack" pilots, was waiting with a Focke-Condor, ready to cross the South Atlantic with the "invasion-plane" plans . . . everything was ready, but Engelberg in New York wasn't getting results.

"I'm bribing waitresses in the United Aircraft Corporation canteens," he cabled to us. "I've discovered a good man, a stunt flier in Hollywood, who is trying to get a job as a Pitcairn Autogiro test-pilot. But it all takes time. I must have time."

There was a furious hunrrel between Engelberg and Otto Abetz immediately Hitler's Foreign Office boss arrived on American soil.

Abetz used S.S. methods to "break down" Engelberg.

By Heinrich Lowe

G-men as well as Otto were interested in the goings-on around Yorkville . . . and Abetz feared that he might be held on some small charge while Hoover's G-men found out his real business.

So that night Engelberg's fate was sealed.

A Yorkville "tough," who earlier on had distinguished himself for his hearty amateur pogroms in the Jewish area, was paid well to bash Engelberg's head in.

G-men arrived in a rush. So did the newspapermen and the cameramen. The Federal police unearthed Engelberg's unsavoury history. His story and the story of his death made the front pages. There was a big scandal, but . . .

Meanwhile, Abetz was on his way to Brazil, and thence by Condor flying boat to Hamburg . . . carrying with him stolen plans of U.S. autogiros!

Don't believe all the fuss you hear about Fritz Kuhn, former Bund chief. It is mostly a lot of eye-wash to give the anti-Nazis in New York something to grapple with.

* * *

I am often asked how it is that Ribbentrop, Goebbels and the rest—who are extremely "German," and know nothing of American sentiment—are so successful in their Fifth Column networks in the States and the South American continent.

The truth is that the Nazis are now only using the remains of the old German spy network begun in 1913 by Von Papen!

During the last war Von Papen's hirelings were responsible for the terrible Black Tom explosion, and the destruction of the plants of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company.

Some six hundred trusted men were found, paid well, and gave good results. They are still working.

But Britain need not worry.

G-man Hoover has cleaned up so many crime and vice rackets that he is quite capable of coping with the cunning of the Nazis.

BEAVERBROOK

A MAN, born poor, son of a Presbyterian minister in a remote small Canadian town, who makes a million pounds by the time he is 30, must be without question an exceptional man. Lord Beaverbrook did that.

Probably no other man now alive could show a like record. Very few indeed have ever done it. It makes his past career interesting to study. But more than this does it make us curious as to his future.

As to how he made his million many stories have been told. W. A. Brittain, in This Man Beaverbrook (Hutchinson, 6d.), says the Canadian newspapers invented the stories because young Max Aitken squeezed one of the Big Shots in Finance out of a cement merger he was forming—for a good reason.

Strange Reputation

This Big Shot wanted to include in the merger a dud company of which he was president. Young Aitken wouldn't have it. So the newspapers, being under the control of Finance, went for him, and his name in Canada was Mud.

I remember being asked often by prominent Canadians when I was over there and he began to be heard of in England: "How can you people tolerate a man like that?" I saw that a good deal of this was jealousy. The questioners would have liked to be heard of in England themselves.

I knew, too, that his cement amalgamation had been a success. But he certainly had a strange reputation, and it stuck to him for a long time.

Most people now think of him as a newspaper magnate. But he had been in London for nearly 10 years before he bought the controlling interest in the "Daily Express."

Press Magnate

He was very doubtful about buying it. And when he had got it, he did not know what to do with it—whether to follow high aims, try to educate the public, or run it simply for profit.

WILL HE REFORM?

I have never believed either in Free Will or Necessity—either in our perfect liberty of choice, evil and good, the trivial and the worth while, selfishness and altruism, or in Fate driving us this way or that in despite of ourselves. I am sure Chance has more than anything else to do with our lives.

By Hamilton Fyfe

If Beaverbrook had fallen in with men of principle and intellect, if his impressionable nature had been moulded to understand and appreciate what a noble profession journalism can be — and ought to be—he might have become a great journalist: a Delane, a C. P. Scott.

Unfortunately the men he consorted with were men of narrow mind. They dragged him down to their level. This was pure Chance. It was a bad thing for the world.

For he dragged journalism down. He sneered at ideals—even when they were far more realistic than the nose-to-the-ground notions of the hard-faced men. He helped to kill the League of Nations by perpetually gibing at it. Thus he helped to make this war unavoidable. For in collective security lay the only hope of avoiding it and keeping Hitler down.

His newspapers combined a sensationalism and a snoopery which were new in this country with an attitude of contemptuous derision towards every policy that had in it any noble imagination, any foresight, anything finer than selfishness as risky as it was low.

He knew the character of the men who were his associates. He said to Arnold Bennett once at a week-end party where Lloyd George and Birkenhead were among the guests:—

"You've seen hell with the lid off."

He described the Tory Party in 1924 in these scathing terms: "Baldwin is an idiot, Austen has sciatica, and Horne is taking dancing lessons."

He was not taken in by them. He let them shape his course.

Mr. Brittain does not, of course, mention such things as this. He writes in an adoring, almost idolatrous strain. I am reminded of Northcliffe's remark after reading a Life of him written by a well-meaning friend:—

"It makes me look as I should look through the wrong end of a telescope."

However, it is Beaverbrook's future rather than his past that interests me.

He has during the past months risen suddenly to the full height of his stature. He has put into the effort of repairing the defects in our aeroplane production, which Chamberlain did not notice, all the fierce energy of which he is capable.

A New Beaver?

He has stimulated and inspired. He has ceased to sneer and gibe. He has found a task into which he can throw all his soul and all his strength.

So far, good. But what of him when that task has been successfully ended? Will he be the same old Beaver, cynical, proud of his ignorance, scornful of any aim but that of profit-making?

Or will he see that by beating Hitler we have got rid only of one enemy to the human race, and will he join in the struggle to get rid of others? Is it incurably optimistic in me to hope and half-believe that he may?

What do the Riom trials mean to France and the French People?

Will there be a revolt against the Men of Vichy?

Can General de Gaulle lead the French to Freedom?

These are the questions discussed here by an authoritative observer

Revolt In France

EVERY major unheaval in the history of France has been marked by some famous State trial or the retrial of a case which had become the symbol of a regime of oppression and of the maladministration of justice.

Everybody will remember Voltaire's successful efforts to have unjust sentences quashed and innocent men rehabilitated; or, nearer to us, the "Affaire Dreyfus," in which courageous thinkers and writers played such a prominent role in demonstrating that the basic principles of justice had been flagrantly disregarded by a military court.

A New Dreyfus Case

A new Dreyfus case, pregnant with the same serious consequences for the future unity of the French nation, is now being engineered by those men who, shielding behind the figurehead of the aged Marechal Petain, enjoy a semblance of power in the rump of France.

Once more men are about to be tried on insufficient evidence, and, which is worse, on the understanding that the present Minister of Justice wants "at least six death sentences."

Once more men are about to be tried in an atmosphere of prejudice and hatred because they are Jews.

Some of these men now under arrest at Chatelguyon may have made mistakes; some of them showed weakness when strength was wanted; some committed errors of judgment, or even worse.

Historians of the future may pass severe condemnation upon those whose duty it was to see to the moral and material preparedness of the French Army, especially Daladier and Gamelin.

They may not spare Paul Reynaud for having included in his Cabinet those very men who were to turn against him and make their own defeatism prevail over his determination to continue the fight from North Africa.

History Will Decide

They may find that Mandel lacked some of the energy of his "boss" Clemenceau when he failed to put out of action those defeatists whom he wanted to arrest and whose first action was to have him arrested at Bordeaux.

History may well decide that Blum, the subtle intellectual and the artist, was not quite the leader that the Popular Front wanted in times such as these.

But will it ever admit that now was the moment for Laval and the obscure personalities with whom he has surrounded himself to stage a State trial of these public men and of others, no doubt, about to be arrested?

Will it not say that Reynaud would, and could, have fought on from the French colonies, that Mandel's strenuous efforts of the last two years had made it possible to conceive a prolonged resistance of these colonies, that Blum would from Africa have commanded the allegiance of important sections of the working-class, and could have directed their resistance to the enemy inside France?

Will it not say, in brief, that these men have been arrested primarily because their presence at liberty in France or elsewhere is a living reproach to the Men of Vichy?

Try as one may, it is impossible to find any honourable motives for the setting up of the Riom trials. The least dishonourable is, perhaps, the desire to divert public anger into channels less violent than might have been feared.

The sudden revelation of the break through and of crushing defeat after months of complacency gave rise to much fury, unreasoning and uninformed. Had they not been told that the Maginot Line extended to the sea and that the French Army had no equal?

And the pro-Fascist local and weekly press had been allowed for years to poison the minds of an uncritical lower middle class by systematic campaigns of calumny against French statesmen; it had fanned the flames of anti-Semitism and hatred of the Popular Front to such an extent that for large numbers of unreflecting people "treason," "the Jews," and "politicians" were almost synonymous words expressive of all their disgust and anger.

The real traitors, those whom General de Gaulle has stigmatised in some of his inspiring broadcasts, are using this anger for their own ends, rather than diverting it.

Judges' Task

The task of the judges is a heavy one if they are conscious of their real duty as Frenchmen and as judges.

But will events allow them ever to complete the investigations which they have undertaken? Will the anger of those who now blame all the institutions of the past seventy years for the defeat of their country not give way to a new anger as the weeks go by and Frenchmen of all parties realise more clearly that even a complete occupation of the whole of Metropolitan France would have been preferable to the unprofitable dishonour of capitulation?

When the collapse came in the middle of June, roughly two kinds of patriotism could be distinguished among the confused feelings of Frenchmen everywhere.

The first might be called the spiritual patriotism of France, the sense that the common heritage of honour, of a sense of justice and social progress should above all be preserved, and that compromise with Nazism could only mean acquiescence in the temporary abolition of these French traditions.

This Patriotism

Another kind of patriotism was more concerned with the "real estate" value of France—with the preservation of its wealth: that is, of the wealth of the monied class. That, no doubt, is the patriotism of M. Baudouin and M. Laval, and of those who preferred to accept defeat and retain something of their financial privileges rather than lose everything for a time and to fight the invader from French soil overseas.

This patriotism is partly that of the peasant, who does not, who cannot, see much further afield than the market borough where he sells his produce.

If France fought this war out and lost large numbers of her young manhood, it was the end of the Senate, an assembly based on a system of suffrage which gave excessive representation to the countryside; it was the final triumph of the Popular Front tendencies. This conception of the patriotism of vested interests is largely responsible for the ready acceptance of defeat by the Men of Vichy.

Popular Revolution?

But what support will these men get from the peasants and the petite bourgeoisie, now inclined to support them out of their fear of "the Reds"—when these classes begin to realise that their money and the produce of their fields are gradually being plundered by the invader?

The rage which will finally explode when all realise the true position will be much more violent than that which the Riom trials are meant to canalise. And it will not spare the Men of Vichy, who will only appear then as the symbols of defeat and of shame.

There is no doubt that France is heading towards a popular revolution, which will sweep away before it all the flimsy structure that the present rulers are attempting to erect in the name of Regeneration and Rejuvenation.

This revolution will start when the Germans are beaten by British forces in the field or when their morale suddenly collapses under the strain of a prolonged war. Chaos may occur at that stage unless leaders appear in time and are able to inspire the masses of town workers with confidence and to reorganise rapidly the economic life of the country.

Who can these leaders be?

It is difficult to conceive that any of the former Prime Ministers now under arrest can ever regain a hold upon public opinion; Reynaud would have been a national hero had he been equal to his task and had he carried out his plans for continued resistance.

It is safe to assume that in the anarchy which will follow German occupation local leaders will arise everywhere among those who will have organised resistance to the invaders. The task of sorting them out will belong to a later stage, when the more pressing problems of food supply and general policing have been solved.

All eyes are, of course, turned towards General de Gaulle, the only Frenchman in a position to speak publicly in the name of France, and to direct resistance from Britain. Very wisely, General de Gaulle avoids political commitments, which could only impair the efficiency of his work.

If the war is won at sea and in the air and by the collapse of German morale, the General may never have a chance to play the purely military role which he conceives as his own.

He may be called upon, on the other hand, to direct the economic and social reorganisation of France and to show the way from chaos to harmonious administration. Does he fully realise what his leadership can do without departing from a wholly non-political attitude, in enlisting the good will of all French workers behind the task of national reconstruction on democratic lines which he may find himself bound to carry out?

De Gaulle's Chance

He has already stated that the present war is a Revolution. Many Frenchmen feel that if he will only define as he sees it the main direction in which this revolution is leading the world, his movement may do more than lead small French forces to victory: it may give new impetus to the French doctrine of the Rights of Man by adding to it a chapter on Economic rights.

Only if it tackles the social problems of the post-war world with the same boldness of thinking which General de Gaulle has applied to military doctrine can his movement hope to lead France out of anarchy when his army sets foot on French soil.

"KEEP IT DARK"

Even if, happily, there is no such thing in this Colony as a Silent Column in a state of innocuous desuetude or poisonously snoopy activity, and it will apparently take more "Keep It Dark" notices than can be printed to repress the Colony's irrepressible chatterbugs, nobody need get into a panic over it.

After all, people must have something to talk about. And what more natural and what easier aid to animated conversation can one find to-day than the war? Almost anyone can wax voluble over a whisky-soda and the thrilling exploit of the Fleet Air Arm at Taranto. And nearly everybody one meets in ferry or bus is an amateur strategist or a keen student of international affairs whose theories on Molotov's Berlin trip or on whether Japan is genuinely sobered up or merely poising herself for a southern expansion onslaught are worth listening to with more or less anxious interest.

A few eccentric exceptions throw up their hands and admit quite frankly that they know no more than the newspapers tell them and are entirely incapable of making a correct guess about Molotov's commitments to Hitler or how long the Greeks can hold out if the Italians and Germans throw their full weight into the invasion. They may even be remarkable enough to prefer to discuss Freud, books, art, music, the state of trade, religion and the weather rather than the engrossing subject of the day after to-morrow's war news.

Does it not strike anybody who is sated with the war as a topic of conversation and who yet cannot divert his attention to anything else, that he might seek refuge in the soothing habit of silence?

One of the most charmingly chatty of English essayists, "Y.Y.", has recently been dwelling on the lovely virtue of continence of speech. He recalls Charles Lamb's praise of a Quaker meeting where men and women assemble to enjoy each other's want of conversation. Much the same thing is happening in railway trains and public conveyances in England, partly due to a fear of speaking out of turn and the high cost of unguarded pessimism in some police courts. The same regulation, forbidding statements likely to cause alarm or despondency, is applicable to Hong Kong, but has not had to be invoked against any individual yet, possibly because we are far enough from the scene of the immediate conflict to glimpse it at all times through rose-tinted spectacles, despite Mr. Churchill's repeated insistence that the next stages may be the hardest. If the Colony has seemingly been free of undiluted pessimism, it is not because many of us exploit the gift of serene and inoffensive silence. Government, indeed, stirs us to more vigorous language than is our wont. Those whose interest in the evacuation muddle is largely academic can if they are purists, still be roused by Government's insistence on describing them as "evacuees." Hence we find it easier to-day to forgive the murmurer of rumours about imaginary troop concentrations along the border or about the arrival at an unnamed war station in the Far East of countless battleships.

But there are, too, as our essayist says, other people whose habit of silence amounts equally to a vice of a different order. Y.Y. once knew a man who, whenever he was told something interestingly scandalous, would look round apprehensively and mutter "Walls have ears." He believes that this fantastic overstatement must have been invented by someone who hated good conversation, or perhaps attended the equivalent of a pre-evacuation sewing circle. It will be readily agreed by all, however, that excessive silence has its horrors no less terrifying than the cheerful chatterbox or the bibulous ebullient bore. The essayist contends that the chief object of conversation is to prevent an intolerable silence. It is easy to subscribe to that view with the recommendation, at the same time, If you can't be good, be careful.

Those The Gods Seek To Destroy

By "CIVIS"

SEVERAL years ago, in 1928 to be exact, I visited Rome and stayed at the Hotel Alexandra. On the morning after arrival I asked the manager if he would get me the address of the school where Madame Montessori first applied her principles of teaching young children. To my great surprise he said he did not know anything about this good lady but would make enquiries and let me know later. I told him that she was more widely known and admired in Britain than Mussolini. He seemed rather pained at this, what he considered, frivolous statement, but was quite mystified when I assured him that this was literally true. On returning about two hours later with a much worried expression on his face he told me that he had enquired by telephone from every place he could think of, but no one knew anything of this famous teacher or her school.

How I finally found the place is too long a story to tell here but it seemed to me very significant that Montessori, the 'propheless, had so little honour in her own country. The explanation lay in the fact that Mussolini's ideals were not those of Madame Montessori. The latter aimed at developing the individual whereas the former sought to suppress him since he wanted robots and not independent liberal thinking persons.

It is not surprising therefore that Madame Montessori found the new Fascist system uncongenial to her spirit, and deserted Italy for Spain. When Barcelona fell, she was taken on board a British cruiser and carried to Marseilles. With other Italian liberal thinkers she found herself in exile.

She represented that tradition which Garibaldi, Cavour and Massini established, and which Mussolini has destroyed.

The dictator cannot tolerate an educational system which runs counter to Fascism. He demands regimentation and absolute obedience. "The Duce is always right" shout the paid ovationists. My experience in Rome showed me that Italy was turning aside from her wise and tried counsellors and entrusting her destinies to an adventurer who would lead her away from her old friend Britain, into perilous courses.

What is Mussolini's record?

Harold Nicholson over the wireless not long ago told a story of his early days when, as editor of a newspaper, he wrapped up a time bomb and ordered his assistant to address it to the Archbishop of Milan.

He carefully used a new piece of blotting paper to put over the written address. When the matter became public and the assistant editor questioned his chief, the latter produced the blotting paper, and asked him whose writing was on it. It was a warning which the assistant needed but never forgot.

Pierre van Paassen in his very able book, "Days of Our Years" gives a fairly full account of this theatrical performer and poseur. The growth of the legend around Mussolini has been carefully built up by his Fascist confederates out of nothing.

There is the myth that Mussolini played an honourable part as a common soldier in the great war.

There are plenty of men alive to-day who served in the Bersaglieri, regiment to which Private Mussolini belonged. "I found half a dozen of these fellow soldiers of the Duce on my wanderings through Italy" says the author. "Everyone shrugged his shoulders when the subject turned on the Duce's war record. The contempt the soldiers had for him provided him with an excuse to seek quick transfers, on the ground that they would do away with him in the midst of an attack.

"The demogogue who rattles the sabre, talks of baths of steel, baptisms of fire and of the regenerating effect of blood letting on the people was not for a minute under shellfire himself."

At the age of eighteen when fleeing abroad to escape military service, he was caught in the act of setting fire to a church. At the trial the charge was changed to one of having administered a beating to an aged cleric, a man of seventy-nine, who had accidentally caught him in the act. For these blows, the only ones Mussolini ever struck in his life he was sent to prison for six months.

This half year of solitary confinement, for that was the nature of the punishment, left him a victim of acute claustrophobia and helps to explain the enormous size of the room in which he works in the Palazza Chigi.

Mussolini was still considered a firebrand anti-clerical and a convinced republican at the time of his march on Rome.

He had himself photographed struggling with a lion whose teeth, it was afterwards revealed, had been extracted. This incident is important for it is the keynote of his whole life. Another stunt was rushing round the roads about Rome at breakneck speed in a motor car, the effect of this again being spoiled when it was proved that Mussolini's double was the driver and not himself.

This then is the type of person who is ruling the great and ancient country of Italy. How or why the people ever allowed him to get into such a position is one of those dark mysteries which will never be explained. Here we have a very poor nation masquerading under him as a world power and a ruler without any principles pretending to wear the mantle of the great Caesar.

Mussolini is the typical bully. Many years ago, at the beginning of his career, he bombarded Corfu, the little Greek Island which according to the terms of transfer from Britain in 1863, had to remain unfortified.

"Punch" had a cartoon about that. It showed the proud and bold dictator with his arms folded, his brow puckered and behaving as though he had fought single-handed and destroyed some stout and worthy opponent. It was the lion without teeth he had been fighting.

Mussolini was a joke then, he is a tragedy now.

Since then he has graduated in the scale of his achievements but he is consistent in this—it is always the little or helpless state he seeks out. He sent troops to Spain to help Franco to crush the Spanish Government. Afterwards it was Abyssinia and later Albania. Then it was a crippled France, now it is a small and weak nation like Greece.

It is astonishing that he should strut and prance on the scene like this, but he loves the spectacular. He suffers from the worst form of exhibitionism. He is in the land of Grand Opera, and like his fellow dictator he loves to play the grand roles. Caesar is his ideal, Sawdust Caesar is his real character. He wishes to revive the grandeur that was Rome, and destroy the glory that is Greece.

It is true that the Greeks are not the Greeks of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C., but neither are the Italians the Romans of the century before and after Christ. The Romans in those days were a frugal, disciplined, heavy and solemn people, in contrast with the lively, quick-witted, original and creative Greeks, who set the standards and provided the models for European civilisation in art, architecture, poetry, drama, philosophy and political science. Are we to witness a revival of the Greek spirit? Whatever happens in the future the very fact that the Greeks accepted the challenge of Rome and stood up against the Italian onslaughts instead of bowing the knee, as Rumania did, gives ground for believing that the spirit of Thermopylae and of Marathon, has been revived.

On the face of it it would seem incredible folly on the part of Mussolini to launch a campaign at the worst time of the year, knowing that his ports would be at the mercy of the joint air forces of Britain and Greece. It was made plain to him several times that the command of the Mediterranean was British and not Italian, and it should have been clear to him that a declaration of war against Greece would make it still more a British sea.

His mare nostrum et clausum was demonstrably false, since he must have known his fleets were always in port and never at sea. Mussolini's exalted state of mind which follows from the exaggerated successes of the past few years means that he becomes the victim of his own imagination and of his own speeches. He has been living in a world of Grand Opera, and so rendered incapable of appreciating the nature of the real world. With a stalemate in Libya where like Napoleon's armies—a far greater leader than he—his forces are smothered by the grains of sand, the Dodecanese cut off, and the Africa communications endangered, Mussolini's position to ordinary observers seems to be perilous.

But the reprecussions of Taranto on the rest of the world are likely to be very serious for Italy. His domination of the Mediterranean is a past dream, his position in Africa must now be a nightmare. The French Colonies will take heart and the followers of de Gaulle will increase. Spain will be less inclined than ever to throw in her lot with a nation that does not and cannot control the Mediterranean.

Mussolini's declaration of war on Greece has altered the whole strategic position in the Mediterranean in favour of Britain and against himself. He has provided the bases that were sorely needed especially after the withdrawal of France which deprived us of Algiers and Bizerta.

Gayda is now whining about Italy having to fight Britain alone in the Mediterranean but even he, if not Mussolini, should not have made the task for his country infinitely harder, by demanding this declaration of war on Greece.

It must be true that those whom the gods seek to destroy they first make mad.

THIS WEEK

The ill-tidings and thrill-tidings that have followed one another in bewildering profusion this week permit of no possible mistake in the final assessment. When the balance is struck, the advantage is Britain's beyond a shadow of a doubt. The savage attack on Coventry, large areas of which have been laid in ruins and ashes will be marked up as a gain by Hitler, though its effect will be to harden Britain's determination to smash the malevolent evil of Hitlerism for all time. The ugly possibilities of a deal between Germany and Russia, on which subject Axis propaganda has been as versatile as ever, remain a source of anxiety, withal the signs are not all of ill-omen. Hitler possibly retains reasons for high expectations. But Britain has her bird in hand. The dash and skill of Britain's naval airmen in the Taranto exploit has changed the whole face of the strategic problems of the Admiralty in all the oceans of the world.

* * *

Il Duce's Dream Shattered

In one fell swoop, any remote hope that Mussolini entertained of obtaining naval mastery in the Mediterranean was shattered. The attack was carried out by torpedo-carrying aircraft which launched their deadly missiles with such accuracy that two of Italy's greatest battleships were sunk though in water shallow enough to keep part of their superstructure above the waves. A third was badly damaged. This means that half Italy's striking power at sea has been put out of commission for a considerable time, and in such a way that the repercussions of the exploit will be felt in every sphere of war action, actual and potential.

* * *

Echo In Every Capital

No sign has appeared of any wavering by Turkey in her loyalty to her pact of alliance with Britain. Had there been dubious feelings in Ankara, Taranto would have dispelled them. Greece's jubilation was justified; General Wavell breathes easier. In Madrid, General Franco will be congratulating himself on a sagacious decision to wait for Hitler to turn his boastings into results. Spectacularly timed to coincide with Molotov's visit to Berlin, the feat could not have been out of the minds of either Hitler or the Soviet Premier when they discussed Axis-Soviet cooperation. Tokyo will re-examine the political situation more closely than ever.

* * *

Gayda All Aggrieved

For Italy, the consequences are plain and alarming. The foray by British light forces into the Straits of Otranto will not be the last of its kind. The supply route to Graziani's armies held down at Sidi Barrani can only be maintained at hazardous risks. Added to the collapse, if only temporary, of the advance on Greece, the effect of the disaster at Taranto on Italian morale, can well be imagined. Signor Gayda, who has so often been Mussolini's interpreter, in a remarkable article proclaimed aggrievedly that Italy's navy was left by Germany to combat the whole power of Britain at sea, and tacitly confessed that the task was too heavy. He was singularly silent about the task of the army in Greece!

* * *

The Greek Campaign

The Greeks, fully recovered from the shock of the first Italian onslaught, are now steadily pushing the Fascist armies back all along the line. Some of the crack Alpini Division trapped in the Pindus mountains managed to get out before the pocket was finally closed, but they fled into Albania weponless, straggling back as a disorderly rabble. In the Koritza region, the full of this vital junction appears to be imminent, cutting off the Italian spear-thrusts into Greece at their roots. Only along the Ionian coastline can the Italians continue to operate if Koritza falls, and here too they have been thrust on the defensive and have retreated across the Kalamas River. Greece's success has exceeded all expectations, but it has been due principally to shockingly bad staff work at Italian H.Q., culpable under-estimation of the size of the job. It is as well, therefore, to contemplate the possibility that reasons of prestige will compel Italy to throw her entire weight into the future stages of the campaign, probably with German assistance, and that future news from this small segment of the Middle East front may not be so excitingly good.

* * *

A Masterpiece In Vagueness

Out of M. Molotov's visit to Berlin came a communique almost a classic in vagueness. Two things appear to be established, nevertheless. Hitler failed to persuade the Soviet Premier to sign on the dotted line. But Molotov, as representing the Kremlin, remains on Hitler's list of prospects. In other words, it is extremely unlikely that the Soviet has committed herself politically to the Axis, but the issue has not finally been closed. In Whitehall on Friday it was disclosed that Britain three weeks ago made a direct offer to Russia of a permanent pact of non-aggression, plus other proposals to terminate suspicion and misunderstanding. In the circumstances, the assumption might be drawn that Molotov's journey to Berlin was to test the size of a German counter-offer. On the other hand, the Nazi claim that the visit betokens a Russian decision to align herself with the Axis should not too swiftly be dismissed.

* * *

Deep Game At The Kremlin?

The riddle of Russian policy remains as much of an enigma as ever. For Moscow to throw over China at this stage in exchange for what both sides would regard as a temporary accommodation arrangement with Japan would seem, in a sane world, to be completely incomprehensible. Yet Russia's relations with Japan were certainly one of the key points of the Berlin negotiations. Equally, any decision to stand aside while Germany swept through the Middle East, would strike any student of "Mein Kampf" as suicidal. The one intelligible explanation of the freak is that Russia is engaged on a deep game of her own choice, boding no good to anyone, including Hitler.

* * *

Hitler's Blunder In Lorraine

Unless Hitler has finally abandoned his whim to bring France to the side of the Axis, a cardinal blunder has been committed in Lorraine. Ruthless deportation of all French-speaking inhabitants has been ordered, with Poland and unoccupied France as a choice of destinations. The anger aroused in Vichy is less against the fact than the German allegation that Marshal Petain assented to the plan. Nevertheless, M. Laval's task has been made much harder, and the prospect of Axis-French cooperation has sensibly diminished. Marshal Petain is under no illusion about the problem created by thousands of fresh refugees, ousted from French territory, who significantly arrived in Lyons in trains decorated with the de Gaulle emblem of Free France. Question is whether he retains his other illusions.

General Weygand, meantime, is still in North Africa. And there he seems likely to stay until the situation becomes clearer. The drama of the French defection may not be over yet.

* * *

Japan's "Plan Of Stratagy"

The Lying Jade's activity in the Far East has been concerned with Japan's interest in Saigon and Camranh, and a totally unconfirmed story that the remnants of the French Fleet are bound for Indo-China. Suggestion is that Thailand will begin something on Indo-China's southern borders and Japan will move in "to restore peace and order." Together with the outline of the plan for occupying North Borneo and isolating Hong Kong from Singapore, the story gives an impression of trading in truth with the intention to deceive. Japan has a lot of deep thinking to do before attempting any deep sea exploits.

Battle Of Ideas:

The Soldier's Leisure

By W. P. Watkins

THE War Office is now engaged in finding winter quarters for the largest military force ever maintained in Britain. It will no doubt succeed—and the civil population will assist gladly—in providing the troops with reasonable bodily comfort.

But that is only the first step to contentment, as civil evacuation should have taught us by now. Congenial occupation is even more necessary if the fighting forces are to be kept in good heart.

A Civilian Army

Invasion or no invasion, the problem of the soldier's leisure will remain to be solved. The less the likelihood of invasion, the more urgent it will become.

It is only too easily forgotten that an army recruited by conscription consists essentially of civilians. Accustomed in Britain to a small professional army, we are liable to draw too wide a distinction between the man in uniform, whose career is arms, and the man in the civvy suit. But even the Frenchman, Henri Barbusse, who wrote the most realistic novel of the last war, discovered with something of a shock that the comrades of his platoon were fundamentally civilians, pre-occupied, even under bombardment, with their trades and business, the hopes and plans of normal family life, which they left behind when they donned their uniforms.

The man, sacrifices more than the uniform. However resolute to do his duty, he welcomes every contact with the ordinary life of home and workshop, farm and shop and office, every release from the sense of wasted time and effort that weighs upon every man who thinks about the meaning of war.

Sports and light entertainment, while they may pass an agreeable hour or two, do not infallibly relieve this sense of frustration. They may even increase it. To say so is not to disparage the admirable work of N.A.A.F.I. and E.N.S.A. or the sports organisations of the Services themselves. These are things we always organise well, and they have their indispensable place. But they do not, and should not, completely fill the bill. They cannot satisfy a modern army's thirst for news, information and education, nor do they provide social intercourse of a kind which the citizen-soldier most appreciates.

Sweden's Way

In Sweden, they have faced these problems more squarely than we have. Last winter the army was fully mobilised, although the country was not at war. With the object of relieving the tension of waiting, a special staff department was created, which secured the collaboration of all kinds of recreational and educational organisations.

The Swedish soldier was offered an enormous choice of leisure-time occupations, ranging from entertainment, pure and simple, to serious study courses. A flexible organisation gave the largest possible scope for the troops to express their own desires and to help actively in satisfying them.

As with us, the collection and distribution of newspapers, books and wireless sets was organised systematically; lectures on military, cultural, social and political questions attracted large audiences. But the Swedes went further. They created numbers of study circles, run with the minimum of formality, where the questions raised by the lecturers could be thrashed out in discussion, and, most valuable of all, encouraged the younger men to continue their civilian professional training which had been interrupted by mobilisation.

This was done by postal tuition, notably by the largest correspondence institute in the country, which is a department of the Swedish Cooperative Union. The steadying influence on the mind and character of the young soldier of pursuing his civil career, and the advantage to all ranks of serious discussion, based on real knowledge, of the issues of war and peace, can scarcely be overestimated. They are the very lifeblood of a democratic army.

Soldier's Interests

The intellectual interests of the British soldier are not markedly different from those of the Swedish. The experience of Universities, Local Education Authorities, and voluntary educational organisations last winter showed that our soldiers, sailors, and airmen are no less alive to the importance of science, literature, music, international affairs and their underlying history and geography, than they were before they joined up.

On this experience part of the new scheme of Army education and welfare, for which a Director of Army Education has recently been specially appointed, is to be based—a scheme which will provide the finest antidote to any tendency to Blimpmindedness—or boredom.

Finally, the soldier needs intercourse of a kind which army comradeship alone cannot supply. Hospitality is needed. We must open our homes to the men of the Services, not simply the older ones who have left homes of their own, but the younger ones, who, otherwise, will seek their fun on the nearest "monkey parade." The canteens, clubs, and writing-rooms established by churches, chapels, and other institutions must be centres from which the sociable soldier, and still more the shy and lonely, can be introduced to a family circle, where he can be sure of finding a warm welcome, cheerful conversation, ready sympathy, and interest in his personal welfare whenever he is free to leave camp.

Moral Is Clear

In "The Road Back," a more revealing, if less famous, book than "All Quiet," Erich Maria Remarque told the story of German youth, swept from school into military service, seeking the way back into civil life after the last war. Many never found the way.

Barracks and the trenches had made them incapable of normal peace-time existence. Of such, dehumanised before they even grew to be men, Hitler and his companions in crime manufactured the ferment of the Nazi movement. The moral is evident. If the soldier's working day must fit him to win the war, the healthy use of his leisure must equip him to cooperate in the restoration of peace.

JERVIS BAY BATTLE EPISODE

Swedish Skipper Turns Back To Pick Up Survivors

THE ARRIVAL at home ports of ships of the convoy attacked by a German surface raider in the Atlantic makes it possible to give some account of how the skill and seamanship of the masters of the merchant ships made such good use of the breathing space given them by the gallant action of the Jervis Bay in instantly attacking the enemy and concentrating attention on herself for a considerable time although hopelessly outranged.

From stories told by masters of the merchantmen to naval officers it is abundantly clear that the whole episode illustrated the excellence of the cooperation existing between the Navy and Merchant Navy.

This close cooperation, together with the skill and seamanship of the masters themselves combined to produce what must in the circumstances be regarded as a most satisfactory result.

There were actually 37 ships in the convoy when first attacked. It will be remembered that the Admiralty communique stated that one ship had dropped behind. Of these 37 ships 32 escaped, four were sunk and one is still unaccounted for.

On the afternoon of November 5 the convoy, homeward bound, was steaming on an easterly course in fine clear weather. Visibility was excellent. The raider sighted at about 6 p.m. was between seven and ten miles away.

Salvo In Middle

As soon as the hostile nature of the approaching vessel was ascertained the Commodore in charge of the convoy made a signal for the convoy to alter course away from the raider.

Practically simultaneously the raider opened fire and the first salvo fell in the middle of the convoy, fortunately without hitting any ship.

Before the second salvo had been fired the Jervis Bay went out at best speed towards the enemy and although hopelessly outgunned concentrated attention on herself.

Several of the merchant ships opened fire on the raider but they were seriously outranged. The master of one vessel, however, claimed to have hit the enemy ship but it is not possible to substantiate the claim.

Almost immediately after the signal to alter course the Commodore told the convoy to scatter and proceed at best speed.

Outmanoeuvred

These ships did so, throwing out smoke screens and varying their movements in a manner highly effective which undoubtedly greatly hindered the enemy and helped the merchantmen to escape.

Having finished with the Jervis Bay the raider then worked around the convoy in search of further victims.

As he did so the masters of the ships watched him carefully and by skilful manoeuvring and making the maximum use of smoke screens they greatly widened the distance between themselves and the enemy ship making it difficult for the raider to concentrate on selected victims.

Dusk and failing light assisted these tactics and as darkness came on most of the ships were able to make their escape.

Swedish Ship Goes Back

A very gallant action much admired by the Navy was that of the Swedish ship Storeheim which, although she had got clear of the raider went back at great risk and picked up 65 men of the Jervis Bay.

The merchant captains are loud in praise of the fine action of Captain Fegen and of the Ship's company of Jervis Bay in tackling the raider and providing the convoy with an opportunity to escape. — British Wireless.

URUGUAY TO BECOME FORTRESS

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

The Uruguayan Government yesterday announced its decision to virtually convert the country into a gigantic fortress for continental defence.

After a Cabinet meeting in Montevideo, in which vast military preparations were approved in principle, it was announced that all the American nations, including the United States, would be permitted to utilise Uruguayan port and base facilities in the event of aggression from abroad.

The sweeping programme envisages the construction of numerous naval, air and military bases, which will be planned so that when completed they will stand "almost within sight of each other."

Heavy Purchases

The programme, which is scheduled to start as soon as possible, also embraces heavy Uruguayan purchases of ordnance and other war materials.

Adoption of the scheme is regarded as a long stride towards realisation of the whole continental defence concept. — International News Service.

MASS REMOVAL OF FRENCH PEOPLE FROM LORRAINE

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

MOVING SCENES were witnessed at Lyons railway station yesterday where since last Monday over 6,000 French exiles expelled from Lorraine by the Germans have been crossing into unoccupied France.

The large majority of the exiles come from districts on the former Franco-German border of 1914. All had to leave within a few hours, leaving behind them all their belongings.

The German authorities gave them the choice of settling somewhere in Poland or going to unoccupied France.

The overwhelming majority chose France despite the fact that the German authorities assured them they could remain in Lorraine temporarily should they choose Poland as their future settlement.

Moving scenes occurred during the arrival of the refugee trains. The carriages were decorated with huge French flags and with Lorraine crosses as worn by Joan of Arc.

Swarms of Red Cross officials catered for the refugees while Government officials directed the exiles to various areas in southern and south-western France. — Havas.

Laval Hastens Off To Paris

What French Need Most Is Patience!

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

"What the French people mostly need at present is patience," declared the French Royalist paper "Action Francaise" yesterday.

"The war is still raging. No-one on earth is capable of making any serious forecasts on it future trend.

France, says the paper, is under such necessities that are far beyond her power to elude.

The duty of Frenchmen is to face the truth however hard it may be.

We have started to pay but a definite bill has not been presented to us, the paper declares.—Havas.

And Still They Talk Of Cooperation

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

The theme of "necessary cooperation" with the Axis is again being developed by the French press.

The newspaper "L'Effort," which succeeded the former Socialist daily "Le Populaire," says: "We must not be like those who reject everything—war and defeat, the old regime and the new, capitalism and revolution, resistance and cooperation.

"Old radicals, reactionaries, repentant Communists, impenitent Royalists, all of them are living in the past."

The newspaper appeals for faith in the advent of "humanitarian socialism" which it says will be installed in the future Europe whose "exasperated nationalisms will be appeased."—Havas.

BRITAIN'S OFFER TO SOVIET

It was confirmed in London yesterday that on October 22 the British Ambassador to Moscow, made far-reaching proposals to the Soviet Government with the aim of disposing of misunderstanding and bringing about a modus vivendi between Britain and the Government of the U.S.S.R.

These proposals included offer of de facto recognition of the inclusion of the Baltic States in the Soviet Union, a guarantee that the U.S.S.R. would be included in the peace conference at the conclusion of the present war, and a solemn undertaking that Britain would never associate herself with any Power or group of Powers in an attack on the U.S.S.R.

This last offer may be said to be a proposal to enter into a permanent pact of non-aggression.

No reply has been given to these proposals which, of course, were well known to M. Molotov long before there was any suggestion of his Berlin visit.—British Wireless.

JAPANESE TROOP MOVEMENTS

FOUR TRAWLERS SUNK

Despite the enemy's extension during recent weeks of mine warfare, the counter-measures continue to achieve great success in keeping clear the approaches to British ports.

This has imposed additional burden on the officers and men of the minesweeping forces, which is well recognised by the Admiralty.

Only recently the Admiralty addressed signals to two minesweeping forces expressing appreciation of their courage, endurance and devotion to duty in clearing minefields under particularly difficult conditions.

It is not to be expected, however, the official Admiralty communique points out, in announcing the loss of four trawlers and one drifter that extensive mine-clearing operations can be carried out without losses.

The trawlers recently lost are Rinovia, Sovra, William Wesney, Stella Orion, and the drifter the Girl Helen.—British Wireless.

SHORT STORY

Honour Among Lovers

A HOT wind swept over the Island of Ibiza.

Over the salt-fields inland the wind seemed almost hotter than the blazing sun itself; certainly it was more exhausting.

All day and all night the wind howled down the street of San Antonio, and instead of shivering you broiled. It was a truly Spanish wind, impartial, hard, cruel.

In the low, flagged kitchen of Garcia Romero's house, which huddled—but not from warmth—against the church wall in San Antonio, two young men sat with Garcia and his wife. They spoke not a word, eyeing each other uneasily. Garcia took no notice of them, did not offer them any wine from his earthen pitcher, for they had brought their own wine in leather bottles. They were suitors for the hand of Garcia's daughter, Maria.

A third young man was even now pressing his suit to Maria herself in her room. It is the custom of Ibiza that each suitor for a girl's hand should be allowed, on any evening when her parents admit suitors, to spend thirty minutes in private conversation with the beloved.

Thirty minutes, no more and no less, and then he must give way for the next man to try his luck. If he stays a moment longer than the correct time he risks, according to a further convention, not merely dark looks when he finally emerges, but knives and pistols as well.

Jose and Pedro watched the slowly ticking clock. In five minutes—exactly—Xavier would clatter down the passage, wish every one a gruff good night, and with his cloak wrapped round him, would make his way home.

Suddenly the door of the kitchen opened, and Juan entered.

Juan ignored him. He moved stiffly over to Garcia Romero.

"Senor Romero, you know me," he said harshly.

"I know you, Juan."

"I wish for your daughter's hand, honourably in marriage."

"You know the custom, Juan."

"Yes! And you know that I am a man who would give your daughter her due on the island."

"Certainly, Juan, I know it."

Garcia spoke with the requisite gravity and politeness. Not even his eyes betrayed the slightest humour.

Jose and Pedro had been whispering while this conversation went on; they stopped when Juan joined them.

"Two minutes."

Juan pulled out a watch, compared it with the clock, and rammed it back into his pocket again.

At the instant when he was due, Juan set his rocky jaw and slapped his pocket softly. In the pocket was a revolver.

★

Xavier appeared, but he was one minute and a half late, just enough to be noticeable on the clock-face. He said goodnight politely to Garcia Romero, strode to the door and disappeared into the night, followed by a baleful glare from Juan.

Jose rose and disappeared up the passage. There was a silence, except for the roaring of the hot wind and the ticking of the clock.

Jose reappeared, to time. Pedro took his place.

Pedro reappeared, to time, Juan took his place. There was no talking, no laughter; it was the custom.

But as Pedro left, after his formal goodnight, he turned like an eel as he heard Jose's voice softly call his name.

"That Juan, he will make things difficult," began Jose.

"Very true."

"Why can't he get married?"

"Because he is so ugly, I suppose."

"Yes, that must be it," said Jose complacently. "Big nose, protruding jaw, yellow teeth; and so clumsy, like a horse wounded in the bull-ring."

★

It was true, Juan, although one of the steadiest young men on the island, with a fair chance of becoming a rich man later on, could not manage to get married, strive as he might. Certainly he was hideous to behold. And his character was hard and stern, matching his voice in its grating formality. But he had great sincerity.

"The Guardia Civil, does it do much, do you think?" asked Jose.

"It talks much," replied Pedro.

"Yes, it talks much. It talks much about putting down our customs of blood. No more murders in Spain, it says. Now, what do you think about that?"

"It is interesting," said Pedro cautiously.

"Now I am, as you know, a fisherman," went on Jose. "In my boat I often have occasion to visit the mainland. There they say that we are barbarous."

"Our customs are Spanish, José, like theirs."

"They on the mainland call some of ours barbarous!"

There was a silence. Both young men kept their hands on their knives. It depended on what Pedro said next whether they used them or not.

"Perhaps they are right, Jose."

"I think they are right," said Jose, more confident now he had found that Pedro was not impervious to modern ideas, and thankful that no old-fashioned stabbing need be indulged in.

"Juan believes absolutely in the custom as our grandfathers knew it," said Pedro. "He is always committing inconvenient acts because of it. And Juan will be a suitor for ever, it would seem," he added thoughtfully.

"And Xavier was a minute and a half late this evening."

The next evening Xavier did not come to the courting. It was explained that the bullet had somehow become lodged in his arm as he was going to work at dawn. The almost inescapable inference was that some one had shot at him, and the Guardia Civil was following up this line of thought as a matter of routine.

But although they bit their moustaches and swore that they would find the culprit, they knew perfectly well that they would never be able to prove anything. Nevertheless, their attitude was considerably more advanced than that prevailing a few years ago, when they wouldn't even have bothered to suppose that there was a "culprit" at all; customs were customs, in those days. Meanwhile Xavier couldn't come to the courting. But Juan came.

By John Arrow.

Once more Jose and Pedro met after the courting, and again the sailorman Jose took the initiative.

"Maria is a beautiful girl," he began.

"Assuredly."

"She has many of the twenty-seven points of beauty of which the poet speaks."

"Very many."

"But her dowry is not large."

"No, not very large."

"Nevertheless it is not bad," said Jose hastily.

There was a pause.

"For myself I do not think it is as large as some I have heard of," said Pedro, helping Jose out.

"There is a girl I have heard of," said Jose, "on the other side of the island. She is younger than Maria, and her dowry is certainly larger. But I have not seen her yet."

"I have heard tell she is very beautiful. All of the twenty-seven points does she possess; and she has many suitors.

"We should stand our chance, Pedro, our chance of happiness with a good wife. Wooing Maria, we stand the chance of death if we so much as stay a second too long with her."

"And whatever happens, Juan will quickly get married," said Pedro.

"Naturally, for he will be Maria's only suitor," replied Jose gleefully.

Juan's farm lay on the cliff near the sea. It was difficult to make a living there, yet he managed to do so, for he was frugal.

When the hot wind blew Juan would open his window that looked out over the sea and breathe in the wind as though it were fire into his lungs. His fierce eyes would glow with the cruelty of the wind that made him cruel, too, that made him haughty, punctilious, a fanatical believer in the old customs.

He was glad that his disposal of Xavier according to the letter of the custom, had driven away Jose and Pedro. He spat contemptuously when he thought of them. No nobility had they, no grandeur!

He had only to wait a few days more, and Maria would surrender. It was only out of true girlish delicacy that she gave him no answer yet. After all, there was but one for her to give.

On the other side of the island Jose and Pedro, now much too friendly for decency as interpreted by the custom, had added themselves to the solemn youths who longed for the hand of Lola, the maid who possessed all the twenty-seven separate and distinct points of lovelliness: three white, three black, three red, three long, three short, three large, three slender, three plump, three thin.

There were six suitors on the bench (a seventh was with Lola) when Juan arrived one night. His heart was raging with fury and bitterness, and a terrible chagrin that the old customs of Spain were being set at naught. His mouth was a hard thin line, his hooded eyes flashed. When he opened the door he let in a blast of the hot wind, but it was not so scorching as he.

As he introduced himself to Lola's father the suitors huddled on their bench; Jose and Pedro stared at each other almost in terror.

"And Maria?" asked Jose, when Juan came to sit alongside them.

"Maria!" She is like you all; no honour, no emotion for what is great, no poetry. It could not have happened in the old days, I tell you. . . . How long has that fellow been in there?" he broke off savagely, jerking a thumb at Lola's door.

"But Maria?" whispered Jose.

"She refused me!" snarled Juan.

"Impossible!" gasped Jose. And although he was himself a liberal and a breaker-down of inconvenient customs, he was genuinely shocked.

"It is the custom of Ibiza that each suitor should be allowed to spend thirty minutes in private conversation with the beloved . . . then he must give way for the next man to try his luck."

BALD PATCH disappeared

thanks to Silvikrin

Read Mr. Jackson's case in the letter below—and look what a fine head of hair he has now, as his photograph shows.

Watch your comb! If there's hair in it after you use it—then your hair is being starved of its natural food. Dandruff and falling hair are the sure signs of hair starvation, which sooner or later lead straight to baldness. Be warned in time! Give your hair its natural food. Give it Silvikrin.

Silvikrin—the hair's natural food

Silvikrin is an exact reproduction of the food that the young, healthy hair gets from the bloodstream in the scalp. It contains no less than fourteen separate and distinct organic elements, in the exact proportion that Nature herself should provide. Its inventor, naturally submitted it to doctors and hospitals for testing—amazing results. Doctors proved that Silvikrin does grow hair—clears up dandruff, prevents hair falling, and if the root is still alive, actually makes new hair grow. Among doctors who were most enthusiastic was the famous Professor Polland, the dermatologist, whose report was sweeping in its praise. (Read it in the booklet with every Silvikrin bottle.)

Dear Sirs,

Silvikrin has done for me all you claim for it. My hair was getting worse and worse—falling out badly. In fact, I had a large bald patch on my head. After two months' treatment with Silvikrin it completely disappeared—new strong hair grew over it. Now, thanks to Silvikrin, I have a head of hair healthy in every way."

(Signed) O. H. Jackson.

FRICTION BETWEEN SPAIN AND AMERICA

Tangier Issue And News Service Dispute

Threats Of Reprisals

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

THE UNITED STATES has lodged representations with Spain in connection with the military occupation of the International Zone at Tangier and is weighing measures to counteract Spain's order barring American news services from Monday.

Nature of the representations over Tangier has not been disclosed in Washington. The United States holds treaty rights in the Zone under the Tangier Convention of 1928.

The Spanish press ban suspends the transmission of news from Spain after Monday by International News, United Press, Associated Press, the "New York Times" and the "Chicago Tribune."

Although the ban purports to be a reprisal for the United States exclusion of the correspondent of the official Spanish EFE news agency, Washington officials suspect other motives. — International News Service.

Madrid Statement

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

The whole of the American press it to banned in Spain from Monday next.

This action, says a Madrid message, is the result of the refusal by the United States to grant entrance visas to correspondents which the Spanish semi-official news agency intended to send to the United States and the American Government's refusal to allow the agency to open offices there. — International News Service.

CHINESE GOODS HELD UP

About 100,000 tons of Chinese goods consigned to China have been held up in Haiphong and Saigon since Japanese entry into French Indo-China, according to word received in Chungking.

It is understood that negotiations for their transport to Hong Kong, Shanghai and Rangoon, between the Chinese Consul-General in Hanoi, Mr. Hsu Nien-tseng, and the French authorities, have thus far proved of no avail. — Central News.

COURT DECISION UPSETS BANKS

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

ACCORDING TO THE NANKING-SPONSORED "CENTRAL CHINA DAILY NEWS" IN SHANGHAI, THE FOUR CHINESE GOVERNMENT BANKS—THE CENTRAL BANK, BANK OF CHINA, BANK OF COMMUNICATIONS AND FARMERS BANK OF CHINA—WILL REMOVE THEIR BRANCHES IN THE FRENCH CONCESSION INTO THE INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT AS A SEQUEL TO THE TRANSFER OF THE CHINESE COURTS IN THE FRENCH CONCESSION TO THE NANKING REGIME.

The paper adds that banking transactions normally carried out by the branches have been virtually at a standstill since the court transfer.

Meanwhile, with the permission of the French Concession police, two trucks carrying plain-clothes Special Municipality police, took over guard duties at the two Chinese district courts in the French Concession, according to the "Evening Post."

Both courts were almost completely idle as only one judge appeared at the Second Special District Court while other officials stayed away from the courtrooms.

It is expected that Nanking will appoint new judges to the courts where many cases are pending.—Havas.

Wartime Fashions By An Expert

A typical 1915 coat frock.

Fashions in dress depend to a large extent upon what happens to be the ideal type of good looks of the moment, and war has a very big influence on both.

Just before the war of 1914 the ideal type of good looks was the ultra-feminine style with much corseted figure, exaggerated curves, long frocks with elaborate trimmings, fussy hair. Extreme of feminine absurdity was reached with the long, hobble skirts of 1913-14.

But the war of 1914-18 killed the "hobbles," and by 1915 skirts had grown wide at the hem and several inches shorter.

And so was gradually evolved the sports girl type of the early 1920's, who wore short, shapeless frocks, both day and evening, bobbed or shingled hair and monotonous pull-on hats.

By the late 1920's looks and fashions had become more sophisticated. Then, in the 1930's the films brought in glamour, make-up was exotic, with highly-coloured nail lacquers and platinum blonde hair. Hats became madly eccentric.

Now the great world war has brought in a new chic simplicity. Keynote of dress is "Be practical, but for goodness' sake let us have colour and line."

Girls not in uniform wear slacks and pull-overs for work as well as for leisure, and "civvy" dress resolves itself into short-skirted suits of the tailored type for daytime and long-skirted tailored suits for the evening.

1940 tailored suit partnered by an amusing hat.

Get Your Face Into Shape

HERE'S an idea for a hobby.

The material is flesh, and the subject your own face. It is called modelling.

So if your nose is too flat or too fat, too wide or too tilted, if your ears curl forward or stand out, or if you've a tendency to be lantern-jawed, you can remould these features nearer "to your heart's desire."

The principle underlying the reshaping is that the flesh must be warmed first by gentle massage, then persuaded in the direction you desire.

Let's begin with the nose. If you who have Roman noses don't like them, much as I hate to admit it, I can't help you. Only plastic surgery can cope with that bony structure.

Roman noses, anyway, look distinguished, but flat, fat ones don't. But as these are a mere matter of sinew and flesh (with the usual trimmings of skin, etc., of course) we can deal with them.

Stroke downwards from root to tip, with the thumb on one side of the nose and the first finger on the other.

Do this until a slight glow is felt. Continue the massage, this time firmly pinching the nose into the shape you want. Pinch the tip hard, if it is too fleshy. Press it downwards if it turns up. Compress the nostrils if they're too wide. Pinch the sides of the nose with a lifting movement towards the bridge if it is flat.

Hollow cheeks can be filled out by pulling out gently the flesh of the lower part of the face at the sides of the mouth between finger and thumb. On no account use this movement higher up on the cheeks. It would be liable to cause "broken" veins.

Ears should be rolled and stroked until they feel slightly warm. If they stand out press them back against the head. Pinch any parts which are too fleshy. Put a pad of cotton wool over the ears, and lie with each one alternately pressed into a cushion for 10 or 15 minutes. If they curl forwards cover each ear with a pad of cottonwool every day for as long as possible. This pad can be kept in place by passing a piece of tape round the back of the head, over each ear, and fastening in the cheekbones with a bit of adhesive plaster. Results in about two months.

VELVET FOR AUTUMN

IT is in the autumn and early winter months that velvet comes into its own, and this year is no exception to the rule.

All those London designers who have been giving dress shows for American buyers have been making a great feature of British velvets, and very lovely they are. Most of them are crease-resisting.

Norman Hartnell introduces the most charming little afternoon frock in black with allover narrow tucks worked with a honeycomb or quilting pattern. It proves an admirable decoration to the dress without detracting in any way from its simplicity of line.

ANGORA PULL-OVER

Ground length velvet skirts partnered by matching angora pull-overs, and worn with heavy gilt jewellery, are both practical and smart, for autumn and winter evenings, especially in country houses where rooms are often draughty, and one cannot be as lavish with coal fires as in times of peace.

EXOTIC

Decidedly exotic and designed for the United States was an evening outfit consisting of a long harem skirt in bright green with a fitted purple bodice, with long bishop sleeves and belted at waist with a bright red waistbelt.

One afternoon frock was in poudre and velvet, the sleeves and wide skirt being in the poudre and the tight-fitting bodice in the velvet.

Fine accordion pleating is in again. It's a great deal used for the long skirts of simple black dinner frocks.

Cheerfulness
comes from Strong Nerves and Restorative Sleep

Two essentials for maintaining a cheerful and confident outlook on life are strong nerves and restorative sleep. To ensure these, there is definitely nothing like 'Ovaltine.'

The pre-eminence of 'Ovaltine' for strengthening the nervous system and giving restorative sleep has been amply demonstrated by independent scientific tests. It would be impossible to claim superiority over 'Ovaltine' in any respect whatever.

The nature and quality of the ingredients and the proportions used are of the utmost importance in determining the value of a food beverage. The ingredients of 'Ovaltine' conform to the supremely high standard of quality set by the famous 'Ovaltine' Farms.

Remember that 'Ovaltine' is a complete food containing the essential vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates and mineral salts in correct proportions. For sleep, for nerves, for fitness 'Ovaltine' definitely stands in a class by itself. Although imitations are made to look the same, there are very important differences.

'Ovaltine' does not contain any Household Sugar. Furthermore, it does not contain Starch. Nor does it contain a large percentage of Cocoa.

If sugar is required for sweetening, you can always add it to 'Ovaltine' yourself. This is obviously the most satisfactory and economical way. Because of its supreme quality and concentrated goodness 'Ovaltine' is most economical in use. For all these reasons make 'Ovaltine' your constant stand-by.

Britain's Secret Eyes

By S. M. Day

A vast subterranean war of nerve and brain is sweeping through the world, organised espionage on a scale unknown in the annals of man.

The day of the humble spy is gone. In his place are ranged trained and picked specialists — technicians, military scientists, so that they can swiftly grasp the significance of anything, from a complicated plan to a movement of troops; combatant cooperators, who assist attacks by working inside the enemy's territory; and a miscellaneous crowd of extras, from cryptogram experts to fifth-column agitators.

What, may we ask, was our own Secret Service doing? . . . The Secret Service is a secret service . . . But if the lesson of the past history of the British Intelligence Service is any pointer to the present, you need have no qualms about the matter.

Let us go back to the days of Queen Elizabeth, not less clever and unscrupulous than her famous father. Philip of Spain had exhausted his patience. Elizabeth and her wily advisers, Burleigh and Walsingham, had tricked him time and again. It was high time that pirate Drake and his buccaneering confederates swung from their own yard-arms.

So Philip sent his agents to report on England's man power, naval strength and coast defences, while his shipwrights began work on his Armada . . .

But not secretly. Two years before the Armada sailed Walsingham, chief of the English Secret Service, knew all about it. A certain Richard Gibbes, pretending to be a Scotsman and therefore a sworn foe of all things English, did a useful tour of the Spanish ports. Methodically he counted some 150 warships and "heard talk of 300 gallies."

Time moves on 50 years, and Dictator Cromwell rules England with the Bible and the sword — plus the finest espionage system in Europe. Chief of Cromwell's secret service was John Thurloe —inscrutable, ruthless, fanatical Puritan.

At least once a week they had to communicate with London. The Venetian Ambassador, Sagredor,—a wily old diplomat—reports home in exasperation; "No government on earth discloses its own acts less, and knows those of others more precisely, than that of England."

The Great War proved the British Intelligence Service second to none in the world. Information carefully garnered before the outbreak of hostilities enabled our navy to strike immediately.

We knew exactly how the German submarines and destroyers were distributed. We knew, and nipped in the bud, the German scheme for despatching armed liners to attack our trade routes.

Many, many other things we knew: So much so that the German naval attache once actually asserted, almost publicly, that for sound intelligence work one Englishman was worth ten Germans. Yet the Germans were spending six times as much money on espionage as we.

And for all the novelists may write, a British Agent has never been caught during peace-time in Germany. No other country has a record comparable with this.

Breathless after slight exertion?

If your heart 'thumps' and you are short of breath after slight exertion, it does not necessarily mean that there is anything radically wrong with your heart. An often unsuspected cause is hardening of the arteries. To overcome the resistance of hardened arteries your heart must pump violently. Consequently you have a 'thumping' heart, dizziness, breathlessness, a dread of sudden collapse.

'Phyllosan' tablets restore the elasticity of the arteries. The circulation is improved, the heart is relieved and its action fortified. Breathlessness and dizziness disappear, appetite improves, and all physical and vital forces are increased, irrespective of age!

It is so simple. Just two tiny tablets three times a day before meals. But if you take the tablets regularly, the results will astonish you.

A Doctor writes:

"As one of the first prescribers of 'Phyllosan' I should like to add my word of commendation to those which you have no doubt received.
I have found it useful in cases of hypertension where there are no signs of organic disease. It seems to keep the blood pressure normal.
I cannot speak too highly of 'Phyllosan' in regard to its use in this condition and I shall continue to prescribe it as before."

FOOTBALL PROBLEMS

(By "THE JUDGE")

This week's problems are:

Q. 1. What would be the referee's position if after whistling up for the second half only eight players of a team lined up?

Q. 2. What interval is allowed at half-time?

Q. 3. Can the referee allow teams to agree not to change ends at half-time?

Q. 4. Can a player score two goals in succession without another player of either side playing the ball?

Q. 5. Can a corner flag post be removed when a corner kick is being taken?

BABY PANTHERS MAY BE TOO GOOD FOR CARDINALS

By "Grandstand"

Some interesting plays will feature the three-game schedule in the Senior Softball League to-day, whilst the Baby Panther-Cardinals' game in the Ladies' League should also prove of interest. All games are at Chatham Road.

Cardinals are much stronger than when they played against Wildcats in the season's opening game, when they were overwhelmed by the Untamed Felines. The addition of Rosita Bagalawski has given the team new courage, and they have shown they can dish it out in the last two games.

Efegina Babida, ace twirler, is reputed to be able to toss a ball with a hook, and if this is true, she will be the only pitcher in the local ladies' loop to enjoy that distinction.

Baby Panthers are a team nobody can be sure of, and there is more than an even chance of their taking this game, which starts at 10.30 a.m.

Wildcats should chalk up another victory when they cross bats with Recreio Ramblerettes at noon.

Wahoos have been working hard during their fortnight's lay-off, and are able to produce a relief pitcher in Ida Castro, who will assume mound duties when they meet the Little Flowers at 9 a.m.

Markar Called Up

In the opener of the Senior League, Saints meet the still undefeated Cyclones at 1.30 p.m., and don't believe they are not proud of their record. Hurler Pinky Pineda, who has pitched the team to victory in their last few games, having enjoyed a period of luck, has called for points North, and relief chucker A. R. Markar will assume mound duties in the encounter with the Collegians. The Cyclone line-up, if their Volunteer members are available, will be first-sacker Markar, second baseman Ikey Haroon, and third baseman Sherry Bux, with A. A. Rumjahn plugging up the windy alley. Ballhawks K. M. Rumjahn, Barney Abbas and Bakar will roam the pastures. Battery will be A. R. Markar and "Skelly Razack".

Saints will field their same line-up as last week, with pitcher Frankie "Bashful" Gonsalves chucking them in to hindsnatching Hal Winglee. Powerhouse Stan Leonard, Ozo Ozorio, and Dave Leonard will guard the basepaths, whilst George Souza will fill the shortstop gap. Henry Showboat Ali will be in his regular berth in the left garden, but the centre and right gardeners have not yet been decided, pending the return of Powlawski.

The Game To Watch

Hong Kong Baseballers, of whose fielding much has been said, will meet Canadian Chinese at 2.45 p.m., and this corner cannot envisage the Canucks coming out on top in this encounter.

With one setback apiece, both the Indians and Recreio Aces will go all out against each other when they meet in the night-cap, commencing at 4 p.m. In view of his sterling work on the mound last week, it is possible that Mentor Riri Noronha of Recs will start Gerry Gosano on the mound again, and he has been considered in certain quarters as deserving a permanent berth in the box. The rest of the team should remain unchanged, as they are near perfect at present. Indians will pitch Kassa, Nazarin, with battery mate Tarzan Ismail, whose pegs to second can still be improved.

This will be the game to watch.

Well Known Society Woman Jubilant — Reduced Hips Three and a Half Inches — Reduced Bust Four Inches—Feels, Oh, So Light and Full of Pep!

Suppose you weighed 13 stone 4 pounds and every time you looked in a mirror tears came into your eyes as you gazed on a huge double chin, heavy arms and legs, large hips and bust. And suppose this over-fat condition made you too heavy for your own feet—until you felt constantly all dragged out, stomach upset with gas and indigestion, and terrific headaches. And then you tried one thing after another—and you're all ready to give up in despair.

SUCH was the dilemma of Mrs. Frank Cole (full address on request). She read about BonKora, the one safe, natural way to take off excess poundage by cleansing wastes from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. But let her tell the story:

"I am so grateful for what BonKora has done for me that I almost want to shout it from the housetops. I weighed 13 stone 4 lbs. After taking just 2 bottles of your wonderful medicine, I am down to 13 stone. I have had to take in all my dresses, for I have lost 4 inches in the bust and 3½ in the hips. And I am feeling better than I have for years. I couldn't digest a thing. I used to suffer from gas in the stomach; constant dizzy spells and from such terrible headaches that at times I could hardly see. I slept poorly. I felt tired all the time and could scarcely do my work. Now all that is gone. I seem to be able to eat anything I like without distress. I sleep well every night and get up feeling fine. I can now work hard all day and never feel tired. I look so well, my friends ask me what on earth I have done to myself. And I tell them, I owe it all to BonKora."

You may not lose 18 pounds in 15 days. But if you have excess fat you can lose it in the famous "three easy stages," as shown in this picture. For the next week, before meals, take a little BonKora, the new safe, easy treatment. No need to starve. Eat as much as you want. The big secret is selecting for each meal the proper combination of foods that do not clog the system and turn to fat. An almost endless choice of appealing dishes, showing you how to select the correct combinations those foods you probably like best, furnished free. BonKora, the safe and effective method to reduce—contains only the choicest and most efficacious medicaments of Nature. POSITIVELY NO thyroid or other drug that may jeopardize your health.

Simply purchase a bottle of BonKora, the new reducing treatment, at your chemist's to-day—unhealthy fat will quickly disappear and with it bloat, gas, and other stomach ills. You'll feel younger; yes, you'll look younger with those bright eyes, and that clear skin and stunning figure which only perfect health can impart.

BONKORA and ORANGE JUICE

By taking 2 teaspoonsful of BonKora in a glass of ORANGE JUICE 3 times daily you will not only lose excess weight safely and quickly, but you will regain your ability to SLEEP RESTFULLY. You will be freed from the pains of rheumatism and the penalties of constipation. The essential vitamins of the orange aid and expedite the amazing beneficial effects of BonKora.

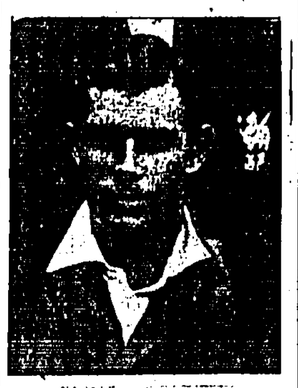
OWEN-HUGHES HAS TRULY REMARKABLE H.K. CRICKET RECORD

Despite considerably increased Volunteer duties, and the consequent lack of practice and an inevitable loss of interest in sport, Harry Owen-Hughes, one of the Colony's foremost all-round sportsmen, made the sports headlines again with a fine innings of 92 against Kowloon Cricket Club last Saturday. Opening the Club innings against a total of 178, he scored 92 out of 154 in 80 minutes and hit 14 boundaries. Yesterday he hit 61 not out, scored out of 89, against Club de Recreio.



EDUCATED at Shrewsbury and coming to Hong Kong in 1922, Owen-Hughes walked straight into the Hong Kong cricket team to meet Shanghai in Shanghai in 1923 and made a very distinguished debut, scoring 30 and 0 and taking 4 for 92, in an innings of 351 and after opening the Colony attack with F. N. Young, and 6 for 74 in an innings of 255 and when used as a first change bowler. His comment on this match was to the effect that he dropped H. E. Muriel when he was only 10 and he went on to score 89 before being run out! In this game H. B. Ollerdessen scored 96, L. A. Quayle 84, Donald Leach 68, "Tum" Pearce 145 not out and R. H. Wild 83.

He has played 11 times for the Colony, captaining the side on at least three occasions, as follows:

LOCAL RECORD

HIS highest score locally is 165 not out, scored against Navy in the 1926-7 Triangular Tournament, and during this same season he had 88 v University, 66 v Civil Service and 55 not out v K.C.C.

About four seasons ago he topped 1,000 runs for the season, and in his first season for Hong Kong Cricket Club, for whom he has always played, he secured 76 wickets, a feat almost without parallel. His long reach caused many a good bowler to lose his length and his best scoring shot is as a result the hook, behind which he gets plenty of power. A slow left-handed bowler, he can make the ball break both ways and comes off the pitch very fast.

In the 1923-4 season he scored two centuries, against Royal Artillery and Indian R.C., and took a hat trick, also against I.R.C., all in the course of four weeks!

He has scored more than 10 centuries in local cricket.

He has registered three hat tricks, once in the match against Army which featured the opening of the Cricket Club's present pavilion—R. E. A. Webster scored 70 odd in this game—and the other two against Civil Service and I.R.C.

He has never taken 10 wickets in a match, but when playing for Old Salopians against North Devon he took the first nine wickets to fall and then brought the innings to a close with a catch in the slips! Last season, when playing for Officers v The Rest of the Volunteers, he took nine wickets and had the tenth caught at the wicket in the last over of the game, only to have the umpire give him not out. The same batsman was also let off in the slips in the same over!

MEMORABLE GAME

ASKED which match he remembered best, he told me of a game against Aldershot Command, for which he motored 70 miles on a bright, sunny day and with a brand new bat in his bag. On his arrival there he was asked if he could bowl. He said, "Yes, left-handed stuff," and then proceeded to give away 40 runs in three overs. Asked where he fielded, he said, "Slips," and then dropped three catches and was relegated to the deep. Asked when he usually went in, he said, "No. 5 or 6," and was sent in No. 5, complete with new bat, with instructions that Ian Erskine of the Scots Guards—he later came to Hong Kong and played against Shanghai in 1928—was swinging rather alarmingly and not to take any undue risks. The first ball came down and went away to the off. He, as he thought, covered up without attempting to play the ball, only to hear [illegible] ment the sound of ball hitting stump, and found his middle peg knocked back! All, after a 70 miles motor journey on a bright, sunny day!

This story illustrates better than anything else the character of the man who has led Club for many seasons and who has topped their averages, both batting and bowling, more times than I can remember. Of his successes he is extremely loath to talk, but he is prepared to give complete details of his failures.

FINEST FIELD

HE mentioned many occasions on which he dropped catches, but if I had to select one slips fielder over the past 10 seasons I would unhesitatingly choose Harry Owen-Hughes. He has brought off the finest catches seen on the Club ground, and his long reach has saved innumerable boundaries following snicks or deliberate cutting.

While on leave he has played with success for the Incognitos and Free Foresters, and his feats for them still live in the bound volumes of "The Cricketer."

RUGGER FOR H.A.C.

WHILE at Shrewsbury — Capt. Skipwith, the Army fast bowler, was at this school some years later — Owen-Hughes played Association football, which he gave up following a broken ankle, fives, at which he excelled, and cricket, at which he was worst! He played Rugby later, for H.A.C. (Honourable Artillery Company) —he has played only once out here, for Volunteers against Club —and did a fair bit of swimming, winning a handicap mile event in the Thames and coming fifth in the Insurance Offices A.S.A. championship when competing against Cross-Channel swimmers.

* * *

FINE SPRINTER

OWEN-HUGHES has also made a name for himself at athletics, being second string in the M. G. Coy. Relay team — Geoff Lammert was first string and the late C. C. Francis and A. L. Eastman were the other two members — which won the Volunteers' event for four years running and which did exceptionally well in Open events. His best time for the 100 was 10.2, as against Lammert's 10 flat, while he also won honours for his Company in the High Jump, besides having quite a reputation as a hurdler at Home.

He represented the Civilians against the visiting Malayan hockey team and was the Club right-winger in the Sim Shield series for many years. Having captained Club for several seasons, he was eventually forced to give up hockey due to heavier Volunteer duties which did not allow him to play on Tuesdays and Fridays.

IN EIGHT FINALS

THOUGH a member of Club's League tennis team for years, he has not won the Club Championship, though he has won many trophies in the other Club competitions, having reached the Final of the Mixed Doubles Handicap, on most occasions from the back mark, on eight occasions, though without meeting with success in this event!

In 1928 he was reserve pitcher and centre-field in the Hong Kong baseball team which played against Shanghai Chinese, and he was pitcher for the Volunteers, the giant-killers in the League. In those days the player who hit a home run earned two complimentary cinema tickets, and cricketers like Owen-Hughes and "Accl" Bowler were frequently guests of honour. Some of the Volunteer team then were Ginger Howell, Teddy Ramsey, who was a brilliant catcher, Oscar Enger, the late Donald Logan, Alec Mackenzie and Bobbie Burns.

I also seem to recall Owen-Hughes doing a bit of boxing for the Volunteers against H.M.S. Hermes. An Olympiad tournament was staged between these two units, and the Volunteers won everything, so "Hermes" decided they would like to fight! Needless to say, "Hermes" had their revenge. The match was held at Murray Barracks and Owen-Hughes met Stoker Addison in one of the bouts. [illegible]

O-LAN WINS ST. LEGER FROM DUPONT BAY

Burford Is Withdrawn

MR. BLACK RIDES FOUR WINNERS IN SIX STARTS

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT BURFORD, WHICH WAS GENERALLY EXPECTED TO WIN THE HONG KONG ST. LEGER AT THE JOCKEY CLUB'S ELEVENTH EXTRA RACE MEETING AT HAPPY VALLEY YESTERDAY, HAD TO BE WITHDRAWN JUST BEFORE THE RACE, OWING TO LAMENESS, WAS RECEIVED WITH THE KEENNEST DISAPPOINTMENT BY THE LARGE NUMBER OF RACE FANS WHO HAD EXPECTED TO SEE A GREAT FIGHT BETWEEN THIS PONY AND MR. T.K.L.'S O-LAN, RIDDEN BY MR. V. V. NEEDA.

As a result of Burford's withdrawal, only two ponies faced the starter for the classic event, both being from the same stable — O-Lan and Dupont Bay (Mr. H. J. A. Hearne). In a slight measure they made up for the disappointment at the non-appearance of Burford, for they put up a fine race, and it was only in the last 100 yards that O-Lan caught up with its stablemate, which had led all the way.

Feature of the day's racing was the excellent horsemanship shown by Mr. D. Black, who scored four wins in six outings to forge ahead in the race for 1940 jockey championship honours. Mr. Black was to have ridden Burford, and had the pony been fit he might easily have had another win to his credit.

Mr. Black's handling of Criffel in the penultimate race of the day was masterly. Badly left at the start, he showed excellent judgment, keeping his mount back till the Distance Post, when he came up on the outside to win a grand race by a short head from Contact (Mr. Needa). Criffel, incidentally, returned the handsome dividend of $57.80.

It was also left to Mr. Black to bring in the biggest dividend of the afternoon. This was in the New Bridge Handicap, when he piloted Brown Derby first past the post to pay $77.70.

T. K. L. was the most successful owner with a first, a second and a third, while the Sylvandale-Criffel combination paid $479.70 to 27 backers in the "Daily Double."

beat 1st Battery "A" (Gnr. P. Morrison, Gnr. J. R. Carr, Gnr. B. I. Bickford and Capt. J. Watson) ..... 28— 8

beat Field Engineers "C" (Spr. A. M. Galman, Spr. J. G. Ozorio, Spr. R. Lapsley and Spr. R. Morrison) ..... 21—16

Both teams seem to have had a fairly equal passage to the final stage, though possibly A.S.C. Company has had slightly the more difficult. In the Third Round they had a hard nut to crack in Carlos Silva's four from No. 5 Company, the game being settled only after an extra head, while they also found considerable difficulty in eliminating their "B" team, only a final spurt at the finish producing the deserved result, despite great efforts by Charlie Rosselet.

Ack Acks' Fine Feat

Both teams had a pretty tough time in the Semi-finals on Sunday last, and the Ack Acks achieved the better performance by ousting No. 6 Company "A" skipped by [illegible]

Field Ambulance "B" presented no difficulty to this strong team from Taikoo, but only a strong finish enabled them to beat W. J. Bagley's Stanley Platoon "A" team, whilst they had a little in hand against Field Engineers' "A" most of the time.

To compare the players is a difficult matter, but I will tackle it as best I can.

Willie Melrose is a powerful lead, and Fred Cullen will need to be at his best to hold him, whilst there should be a little—a very little—in Hyde's favour against Bob Main as No. 2.

Dick Keown and Joe Meyer have met many times in the past, as skips, and although the former has the better record in that respect I do not say he is a better player than his adversary to-day.

Both skips are better at drawing than driving, though neither is averse to a yard of running should the situation demand it.

It will be anyone's game, but as my forecasting has not been good lately I will tip A.S.C. Company to scrape home narrowly—without prejudice!

NAVY BEAT POLICE BY LARGE MARGIN IN DULL Q.T. GAME

By "Scrum-Half"

NAVY OPENED THE 1940-41 Quadrangular Rugby Tournament yesterday at Boundary Street when they beat Police, who were responsible for the Triangular Tournament, which dates back to 1910, being converted into a Quadrangular Tournament this season, by a goal, a penalty goal and four tries (20 pts.) to nil after an interval lead of 11-0.

It was an uninspiring match in which few lived up to the standard expected of them. Honeywill was very safe at full-back for Navy, while Rutherford and Carter established a sound understanding, besides playing excellently individually. At forward Taylor, Poole and Manfield impressed, and Watson invariably had the better of Lewis at hooking.

Only Police player to shine was Wright-Nooth, and he worked himself to a standstill, doing valuable work all the time.

Bowden Does Well

Navy were without McGill, who was very capably understudied by Bowden, and Beattie and King, for whom Brewer and Longmuir were brought in. Police were without Howlett, who was playing soccer, and this forced Innes to play centre threequarter, thus robbing the pack of a versatile forward without gaining the slightest advantage in doing so. Leslie was at scrum-half in place of Morrison.

Leslie arrived a few minutes late, and during this period Wright-Nooth played scrum-half, with Oakley at threequarter in the absence of Dingsdale, thus leaving the pack to scrum down 3-3 in the tight. Navy took full advantage of this handicap and by the time Dingsdale arrived they were not only three points up but they had established a superiority at forward that was to be theirs to the end.

Penalty Goal

After Robinson had almost broken through Dempsey was off for a moment or two to stop a bleeding nose, and it was during this period that Watson kicked a penalty goal for Navy, from the 25 yard line and from a favourable position. Watson failed with a second attempt, from 40 yards, and immediately after Dingsdale put in an appearance. Navy celebrated the occasion with a fine bout of passing from Rutherford to Carter to Paul to Bowden and inside to Paul, who easily scored close in for Watson to kick a goal. Watson then had a third penalty kick, but failed from near the touch line. Paul threw away a great chance when he was grassed in possession by Wall with Bowden unmarked on the wing. He, however, made amends soon after when he intercepted a pass and transferred to Bowden, who passed to Carter, who had come up on his outside, for that player to punt ahead and secure the touch down in the corner. Longmuir failed to convert.

Second Kick

For the second time in the match Navy commenced play with the kick-off—Police did not seem to want the kick and Carter was not fussy—and Carter very nearly scored after a well executed dribble. Bucknell then dummied and shook off a half-hearted tackle and went over fairly close in, but Watson did not add the goal points. Soon after Carter punted ahead and Manfield beat both he and Wall to the touch down, but again Watson failed with the kick. Navy's last score followed a bad knock-on by Carter which went unnoticed, the ball going right along the line to Robinson, who handed off Wall in great style to score far out. Carter failed with the kick. Paul attempted a dropped goal and Taylor appeared to get over after a good dribble, but the try was not allowed. In a last desperate effort Police brought Wright-Nooth out of the pack and played three centre threequarters—not a five-eighth—but it was unavailing.

The few occasions Police backs did get the ball all hope of scoring was dashed by cross-field running by Leslie or the selfishness of Reynolds.

NAVY—Honeywill; Robinson, Bucknell, Paul and Bowden; Carter and Rutherford; Palmer, Watson, Manfield; Taylor, Brewer; Wilkinson, Longmuir and Poole.

NEXT MATCH

Next Quadrangular Tournament game will be played on Saturday, November 30, when Club visit Army at Sookunpoo.

CLUB ARE MASSACRED BY ARMY

By "SCRUM-HALF"

Club, without Jimmy Thomson and G. G. Davies, for whom T. O. Morgan and G. B. Godfrey substituted, suffered their biggest defeat in years when they lost to Army in a friendly match yesterday at Boundary Street by a goal and five tries (20 pts.) to a try (3 pts.) after being led 9-3 at the interval.

Morgan could not be blamed for the defeat as Macrae very seldom beat Ford for possession, and on the few occasions he did the ball came out so slowly that Duke and Pinkerton gave him a very worrying time.

Club were not at their best, but this does not in any way detract from the Army triumph. It was as clear cut as the score suggests, and they look like winning the Quadrangular Tournament without a check.

Army have some excellent talent this season. Macdonald, a comparative newcomer to the game, was one of the outstanding players on view yesterday, and yet when Hook gets over his foot injury Coombes will go back to the centre and Richards will be on the wing, and there will be no place for Macdonald, unless Army Selectors have their eye on the full-back position.

Richards Shines

Richards did well in the centre, but Douglass and Coombes were both below form. At forward Ford gave another rousing display and Duke caught the eye more than once in a pack that worked well together.

Club backs were starved for long periods on end and Stewart handled the ball only twice. Heasman was the pick of the forwards.

Club opened the scoring through Charter, Aitkenhead failing to convert, but Army were 5-3 ahead at the interval through Millar (Douglass converted) and Coombes. In the second-half tries were scored by Richards, Ford and Macdonald (2).

ARMY—Clague; Marsh, Douglass, Richards and Macdonald; Coombes and Wedderburn; Bompas, Ford, Sutherland; Millar, Culbertson, Pinkerton, Gillan and Duke.

CLUB—Thompson; Bosanquet, Day, Aitkenhead and Stewart; Charter and Morgan; Heasman, Macrae, Hackett; Gairdner, Needham; Godfrey, Taylor and Kennedy.

EIGHT WKTS. FALL IN 4.3 OVERS

A team captained by Lieut. Fargus beat Craigengower Cricket Club by 6 wickets in a friendly game at Happy Valley yesterday.

Feature of the match was a fine bowling performance by Pte. Emmerson, who bowled four overs to take 6 wickets for 17 runs, while Pte. Slade, as last change, sent down only three balls, in the course of which he took 2 wickets!

BATSMEN WERE IN GOOD FORM AT CHATER ROAD YESTERDAY AND NO FEWER THAN 342 RUNS WERE SCORED IN THE COURSE OF THE MATCH BETWEEN HONG KONG CRICKET CLUB AND CLUB DE RECREIO, WHICH WAS LEFT DRAWN.

Club batsmen took heavy toll of the formidable bowling combination of E. L. Gosano and Ozorio, and Grose and Knight added 53 for the first wicket before Grose was caught by E. L. Gosano off the bowling of his brother "L. G." Knight went on to score 49 (seven fours) out of 102 in just an hour and was associated in another partnership for the second wicket with Ride, which realised 49 runs. Owen-Hughes and John Pearce carried on the good work, and added 61 runs for the fourth wicket.

Owen-Hughes was 61 not out when the closure was applied. He hit one six and nine fours, and his 61 were scored out of 89!

Recreio started badly and lost their first five wickets for only 46, but a sixth wicket stand between L. G. Gosano and Reed, realised 80 runs and was instrumental in saving the side. Gosano was at the wickets for 90 minutes, hitting 10 fours and scoring his runs out of 126. Reed hit five fours.

Owen-Hughes was the most successful Club bowler, taking 3 for 44.

LADIES' HOCKEY LEAGUE

Enquiries among the Hon. Secretaries of Ladies' hockey clubs reveal that the necessary machinery is being put in motion to form a League. It is understood that matches will start at about the beginning of next year. Meantime the teams are gradually being worked into shape by means of friendlies which now take place regularly.

SWIMMER TOP SCORER FOR 'VARSITY

At Happy Valley yesterday University beat Police Recreation Club by 5 wickets in a friendly cricket match featured by steady bowling on both sides.

Taking first lease of the wicket, the home team lost 4 wickets for 13 runs. Orem and Danbrowsky then got together and carried the score to 65 before the latter was bowled by Gill. His contribution was a valuable 13. Orem hit five boundaries in his 29.

Charles Huang, well-known swimmer, scored 32, which included five fours, and it was chiefly due to his effort that the undergraduates managed to pass the Police total with five wickets in hand.

ANSWERS

(Questions on Page 16)

A. 1. The referee would restart the game and report the matter to the Football Association. (Some seasons ago, a team in the English League Division III (Southern Section) did this self same thing, and they were fined £25 and severely cautioned).

A. 2. Five minutes.

A. 3. No. He must enforce the changing of ends.

A. 4. Yes. The centre-forward of the "A" team runs through and scores. Before the ball can be centred the whistle goes for half-time and on the restart the same centre-forward, kicking off, kicks the ball well forward. The inside-right of "A" team running after the ball is fouled within the penalty area by the back of "B" team. Neither has played the ball. The centre-forward of "A" team then takes the resultant penalty kick and scores. This is of course very unlikely, but possible.

A. 5. No.

In partnership with K. M. Baxter, who made fifties in his previous two matches, he added 109 for the first wicket, of which Baxter's share was only 26.

Hulse Worries Recreio

Although they were able to total only 67 runs, Diocesan Boys' School fully extended Recreio juniors in their friendly match at King's Park yesterday and the Portuguese team succeeded by only one wicket in an exciting finish.

Playing for the School, A. J. Hulse, the Craigengower senior player who is now on the School staff, made 30 and was the only D.B.S. batsman to cope with the bowling of Alves and M. Remedios. The former had a devastating last spell, taking three wickets with four balls to finish up, with 4 for 8.

Only a dour innings by A. M. Rodrigues, former senior eleven captain, saved Recreio from defeat, his innings of 36 including only two fours. Hulse took his first two wickets in three overs for one run and finished up with 6 for 23, while Macauley gave him good support, taking 4 for 14.

WITH RICHARDSON CARRYING HIS BAT FOR 60 RUNS, CIVIL SERVICE CRICKET CLUB DREW WITH KOWLOON CRICKET CLUB IN A FRIENDLY MATCH AT COX'S ROAD YESTERDAY.

Having first use of the wicket, K.C.C. lost 6 for 77, only A. Zimmern, who made 38 out of 74 in 60 minutes, offering any resistance, but B. D. Lay and E. C. Fincher then added 45 for the seventh wicket, and, with F. Zimmern later hitting out to good effect, the home team were able to declare with their total at 163 for 9.

Civil Service lost Colledge with only four runs on the board, but Richardson batted dourly and never looked like getting out. He carried his bat for 60 runs in 90 minutes and was associated with Griffiths in an unbroken fourth wicket partnership which realised 61 runs. Griffiths hit five fours in his 34.

LAST PAIR TOGETHER: 87 BEHIND

In a friendly cricket match at Central British School yesterday, Royal Corps of Signals were unfortunate not to force a decision against Royal Army Ordnance Corps.

Consistent batting by Signals enabled them to total 150, Blount hitting three fours in his 32, to which R.A.O.C. replied with 63 for 9, Boocock being top-scorer with 29.

Blount was in great form with the ball and took 5 for 17.

KOWLOON LOSE WILLIAMSON BUT STILL BEAT POLICE

At Kowloon, Police lost First Division points to the home team by the only goal of a match which produced very little good football and in which the standard of play was only up to that of an ordinary Second Division match.

At times play became very rough, and several players had to be warned.

Kowloon showed good understanding at times, but in front of goal their forwards held on to the ball too long, and so wasted many fine opportunities of scoring. Eastman was taken from the defence and placed on the left-wing, and, although he seemed strange there at first, he soon got into the way of swinging the ball into the centre and initiated some very dangerous moves.

White had another change of position, this time appearing as centre-forward. He was not much of a success there, however, not possessing sufficient dash to break through the stout Police defence. Jackson and Truscott were the best of the forwards, both having to be watched constantly. The former rounded off a fine game by scoring the winning goal for Kowloon.

Williamson Hurt

Most of the work among the halves was done by Maxwell and Hutchison as Williamson lay well back between the backs. Late in the second half he came into collision with a Police forward and had to be carried off the field.

Ulrich played well in the first half, but later in the game he became rattled and miskicked on many occasions. Lapsley is improving with every game and should soon make a first class custodian. His handling was very safe and he stopped several hard drives from close range.

Manning, a newcomer to the Police team, was in goal, and played a useful game. Although never brilliant, he handled the ball confidently and brought off some good saves. Blackburn and Parker were very steady at back, and between them they broke up many dangerous raids that had left the halves standing.

BLACKBURN

Pope and North were the pick of the halves, Hogarth not appearing at home in the centre and being beaten too often.

Lau Strengthens Attack

The forwards were strengthened by the inclusion of Lau Pak-hung at outside-left. Ferrier spoiled many good moves by hanging on to the ball too long, and he was the weakest link in the line. Howlett played a great game, but he fed the outside-right too much instead of trying shots himself. Fan Kwai-choi did not have much idea of the duties of a centre-forward and was caught offside too often.

In the opening minute of the game Lau Pak-hung ran through on his own, but when only five yards from goal he shot hopelessly over the top. Jorge sent White through the centre and, after beating two men, he passed to Eastman, whose shot just missed the upright. Police went very near scoring when Fan Kwai-choi beat the goalkeeper with a nice header, only for the ball to hit the crossbar and go over. Lau Pak-hung was given a great chance of scoring just before the interval, but when only three yards from the goal he shot wildly over the top. The whistle for half time went with the score sheet blank.

Jackson Scores

Police had far more of the play in the second half, and it was against the run of play when Collier sent a pass to Jackson for the latter to score with a fine cross-shot. Howlett again and again sent the outside-right away with fine passes, but the winger's centres always went too far over and Lau Pak-hung was never in position to receive them. Too much inter-passing in front of goal robbed Police of at least two goals, while the centre-forward was too slow to seize his opportunities. In the last minute of the game Hutchison sent in a hard drive that had Manning completely beaten, but the ball struck the crossbar and rebounded into play.

KOWLOON—Lapsley; Lamb, Ulrich; Maxwell, Williamson, Hutchison; Truscott, Jorge, White, Jackson and Eastman.

POLICE — Manning; Blackburn, Parker; Pope, Hogarth, North; Gough, Howlett, Fan Kwai-choi, Ferrier and Lau Pak-hung.

7TH A.A. LOSE MAN & THE POINTS

The reason for the 7th R.A. defeat was quite apparent—they played with only 10 men in the second half and tired quickly.

From the first half display it seemed as if 7th A.A. were going to walk away with the points—they swung the ball about well, always finding their men, and always getting to the ball first—but it was exactly the reverse in the second half, with 24th Bty. having the majority of the play.

MacCudden played a moderate game in goal, but had little to do, being well covered by two good, stout backs in Barsby in Lawton. Woodington, in the pivotal position, was a dominant personality in the first half, but on the reception, try as he did, he could not get his forwards going. The approach work of the forwards was good to watch, but they lacked the finishing touch.

Minshull, the 24th Bty. custodian played his usual steady game, saving several good shots, whilst Raper and Dainty were two good backs, the latter playing a great game, clearing strongly and forever harassing the A.A. forwards. Twidale has still to find his last season's form, but he managed to hold up Biggington, the A.A. centre-forward. In the forward line Atkins was the main schemer, and his distribution of the ball was a joy to watch.

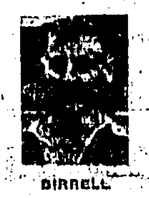
TWO LUCKY GOALS GIVE ENGINEERS THE POINTS

ALTHOUGH ENGINEERS CONTINUED IN WINNING VEIN IN SECOND DIVISION AT CAROLINE HILL YESTERDAY, THEY WERE FORTUNATE TO BEAT ORDNANCE BY TWO CLEAR GOALS, AFTER FAILING TO SCORE AFTER THE INTERVAL.

Both goals were lucky ones, the first from a penalty, which Li Wai-lam placed weakly past Reynolds, the 'keeper nearly bringing off the unexpected, whilst Shaw registered the other goal from a long range kick which Reynolds appeared to have covered, but after partially saving allowed to enter the net.

Both sets of forwards were off form, and Fox has seldom played in a game in which he received so few opportunities. This was mainly due to the splendid play of Stephens, Ordnance pivot, whose heading was not only spectacular, but very effective. The remainder of the Sapper forwards spoiled many promising movements by over-doing their short passing and lacking the finishing touch. Li Wai-lam played well on the right-wing, and his partner, Jones, promoted from the junior side in place of the injured Chan Kum-poy, gave him all the support desired.

Shaw played another one of his sterling games in defence, and was ably assisted by a hard tackling half-back in Birrell. Neither of these players put a foot wrong during the whole game. The defence was very sound, particularly when Ordnance pressed in the second period, only the fine keeping of Moxham preventing them from scoring on several occasions.



BIRRELL

Reynolds played a splendid game for the Ordnance, although his two lapses cost them the points. The backs tackled well, but their clearances lacked power and were poorly placed, whilst the halves were splendidly held together by Stephens. Burnes, playing in his initial game for Ordnance, was a rare worker and was mainly responsible for subduing the Sappers' dangerous left-wing. Their forwards were much the same as the Sappers, indulging in far too much fancy passing, instead of adopting more direct methods. The only redeeming feature was their second half effort, when Moxham had an anxious time.

SALTER MAINLY RESPONSIBLE FOR KOWLOON BREAKING DUCK

At Kowloon, the home team secured their first point of the season when they drew with Police, each side scoring three times after Kowloon had led 2-1 at the interval.

Kowloon played throughout the first half with only 10 men, but during the interval the eleventh man arrived. From then on, however, they gradually lost way until finally Police drew level. Most of the Kowloon players are far too young to be playing in Second Division, and defeat after defeat many spoil their later efforts.

Salter deputised in goal and, even though he made a bad mistake in letting in the first goal, his subsequent display kept the Police forwards at bay and he deserves most of the credit for the point earned. Humphrey and Castro did not cover at all well, and there were too many breakaways through the centre. The halves were the strongest section of the team, Lapsley and Kwok especially playing well. Henderson, in the centre, strayed too much and gave the opposing centre-forward too much rope. Silva was the best of the forwards, and was given good support by Collier.

Police had a few changes in their team, which has increased their scoring ability to a marked degree. Watt had not the slightest idea of handling a ball in goal and used his feet whenever possible. Once or twice he was seen dribbling with the opposing forwards. Pile was good at left-back, Britain, the centre-half, was the best defender on the field, but had little support from the wing-halves. Of the forwards Bodle and Morrison played well, though they did not use their wingers enough.

SING TAO HAVE GOALKEEPER TO THANK FOR 3-1 WIN

Club Concede 5 Goals

SING TAO GAINED AN EASY VICTORY ON THE CLUB GROUND WHEN THEY DEFEATED CLUB BY FIVE CLEAR GOALS.

Showing all-round superiority the Chinese completely dominated the whole of the game, and with more shooting and less passing in front of goal would have registered double figures. A rock-like defence easily repelled the infrequent raids of the Club forwards and penned them in their own half, where the smooth-working Sing Tao half-back line took control of the game and repeatedly sent their forwards away with accurate passes.

Lai Kwok-chiu gave a fine display at centre-half and always came off best in his exchange with Roscoe, Club centre-forward. The weakness in the Sing Tao defence was the short-passing between the full-backs and half-backs in the danger zone. A really full-blooded clearance was rarely seen, and had the Club forwards been quicker to take their chances they might have successfully intercepted the ball on many occasions. This weakness spread to the forward line, scores of chances being allowed to go abegging through the inability of the players to round off their skillfully planned approach work.

Tam Chiu-khoan and Wo Chiu-chung were the chief offenders in this respect, and, although they both scored twice, they missed many opportunities of increasing their "bag."

Loo's Fine Display

Au She-ngok and Loo Tun-yung were much too clever for Upton and Macfarlane and did pretty much as they liked throughout the game. Loo Tun-yung was the instigator of many dangerous moves and had a hand in at least three of his side's goals.

Club never really came into the picture, and little can be said about their team. Marvin gave a good account of himself in goal, and was the saving grace of a very weak defence. Coleman was all at sea against the fast-moving Chinese forwards, and the whole half-back line was slow and unsteady. Foullard improved as the game progressed, and in the second half was responsible for some good runs down the wing, but these were absolutely solo efforts, for he never received any support from his team-mates. Carr was a failure on the left-wing, and Roscoe missed some open goals. Morrison tried hard, but he was no match for the Chinese defenders, who were always masters of the situation.

MIDDLESEX HIT POSTS AND CROSS BAR TIME AND AGAIN

M'SEX HARD PRESSED

Middlesex had to fight hard for their 3-2 victory over 30th Heavy Battery, R.A. at Sookunpoo. At half time the score was 2-all.

It was a fast, ding-dong struggle, with very little to chose between the two teams, and the result of the game was never a foregone conclusion.

For the Battery, Guy was prominent. He had a close grip on Jennings, out of which the Middlesex man found it difficult to wriggle. Solid in defence, the centre-half was instrumental in breaking up the majority of the "Dichards'" movements before they could bring goals.

Blackburn, Middlesex's centre-half, did splendid work in keeping the Battery's inside men at bay, and Woolridge, who was prominent in the opening stages, was allowed to do little thereafter. Marshall, a resourceful winger, proved too good for the left flank of the Regiment's defence on occasions, and he was always dangerous.

Jennings, well policed by Guy, found his movements severely hampered, yet he was always in the thick of things. He tested Woodfin with several powerful drives, but his shooting generally was erratic, and on a number of occasions he shot when it would have been far better to have passed to one of his inside men.

Revell played a sterling game at right-back for the "Dichards," having more than a little to do with the inability of the Battery forwards to turn their opportunities to account. Captain Mann was cool and safe in goal, but was less frequently tested than Woodfin, who came through a rather hectic afternoon with flying colours.

SING TAO ARE A LUCKY TEAM. YESTERDAY THEY SECURED FULL POINTS FROM THEIR FIRST DIVISION ENCOUNTER WITH MIDDLESEX AT SOOKUNPOO BY 3 GOALS TO 1, A SCORE VERY MUCH AGAINST THE RUN OF THE PLAY. CROSSING OVER A GOAL DOWN, THE "DIEHARDS" PLAYED DETERMINED FOOTBALL AND EQUALISED AND BUT FOR SHEER BAD FORTUNE WOULD HAVE RUN UP QUITE A CONSIDERABLE SCORE.

Sing Tao have two factors to thank for their victory—Dame Fortune and a brilliant goalkeeper. Principally Dame Fortune. Cheung Wing-choi played a grand game. He was kept constantly busy, and there were occasions, when, with the defence spreadeagled, he was left helpless, only for shot after shot to snick outwards off the uprights or strike a bewildered opponent and rebound out of the danger zone.

"The Dichards" played a cool, well-balanced game, and forced play for the greater part of the time, keeping their opponents in their own half for long periods. Sing Tao, while frequently initiating fash breakaways, never succeeded in maintaining pressure on the Regiment's goal.

The Chinese were the faster combination, and must receive credit for a good display of ball control, though their clever manoeuvring rarely got them anywhere. In contrast, the "Dichards" play was modelled on more straightforward lines, and showed its effectiveness by the concentration of play in Sing Tao territory for the greater part of the game.

Cheung Wing-choi, Sing Tao's saviour on innumerable occasions, gave a faultless display. He was frequently tested by Coomer, Middlesex's hard-shooting right-winger, who saw a succession of powerful shots smash against the side of the net, an inch or so on the wrong side of the upright. Cheung frequently robbed the Middlesex inside men as they were getting into shooting position, on a number of occasions gathering from Tait's boot, while he made one really spectacular clearance in the closing stages, rushing out to the edge of the penalty area to gather a corner kick by Coomer.

Drake, in the opposite goal, was sound. Until the latter part of the second half he was not called on nearly as often as Cheong, but he, nevertheless, brought roars of applause from the crowd with first-class saves from Lai Shiu-wing and Kwok Ying-kee.

Served by two excellent wingers in Coomer and Marable, Middle were strong in attack. Marable was having a tough fight to get the better of Leung Yin-chan, but Soong Ling-sing could do little to hold Coomer, and Lee Tin-sang had to play a desperate game to deal with the winger and the inside man.

LEE TIN-SANG

The "Dichards" were without Sheehan, who is in hospital, and though both Tait and Pearson were both tried out in the centre berth, there was little real punch from the leader of the attack.

Bright and Wilkinson, in the half-back line, played with less sparkle than usual, but with a quiet purposefulness that kept the Sing Tao inside men well away from the danger zone time and again. Kwok Ying-kee was very elusive, but never bettered the centre-half. It was a case of a good little 'un against a good big 'un, with both sharing the honours.

Thrustful Winger

Sing Tao were well served by Lai Shiu-wing and Tang Kwong-sum. The latter, a thrustful winger, proved too fast for Thomas, but far too little use was made of him, the inside forwards being too prone to work the ball down the middle. Ip Pak-wah did some good runs down the line and centred well, but neither Fung King-cheong nor Kwok Ying-kee were in shooting form, slicing several of the opportunities the winger gave them.

Sing Tao opened the scoring when Lai Shiu-wing netted from a pass sent in by Tang Kwong-sum. After the interval Middlesex drew level when Saw turned to account a penalty conceded by Hau Yung-sang. In the later stages Kwok Ying-kee placed Sing Tao in the lead by forcing the ball out of Drake's hands into the net, and Lai Shiu-wing netted the third shortly afterwards.

SEABROOK SAVES 2 PENALTIES

Gunners were superior in all departments and fully deserved their win. Seabrook, in goal, had a grand day, saving both times from a twice-taken penalty. Elliot was the outstanding back, tackling cleanly and clearing strongly. His colleague, Yearling, also gave a good performance but missed a penalty. Of the halves both Walker and Yee Fook were prominent—the latter in particular. The main feature of the forward line was Cross's long sweeping passes to Owens, whose centres were a delight to watch.

Mak Yeung-fai, in the International goal, was none too steady and lacky weight for that position, being bundled into the net by Cross, for the Gunners' first goal. Both backs played well together, but lost heart and strength towards the end, when their goal kicks were very weak, travelling just outside the penalty area. Rumjahn was again outstanding.

SERVICE CORPS WIN BUT SHOULD HAVE DOUBLED SCORE

At Happy Valley, R.A.S.C. defeated A.S.A. by 3 goals to 1, and A.S.A., who were 2-0 down at half time, were lucky that the margin was so small for had the Corps forward line been on the mark with their shooting the score might have been doubled.

The Corps defence easily accounted for the spasmodic raids made by A.S.A., while Fare and Greenwood played well together, and most of the danger to the A.S.A. goal came from these two.

For A.S.A., Knox tried hard to get his forwards moving, but many of his passes went astray. Petrove, at right-half, gave a sterling performance, and throughout the game he had the measure of Taylor, Venezs, in goal, played well, although some of his saves were more luck than good judgment.

POINTS FOR GUNNERS

The football served up by both teams was exceptionally poor, although Gunners deserved their win, if only for taking the chances offered. First-time kicking was very much in evidence, but the majority of it was aimless and to an opponent. The chief offenders were the Sappers' trio of half-backs, who after retrieving the ball simply booted it anywhere. There was also a decided lack of cooperation between halves and forwards, Sumner being the only player to attempt to get the forwards into motion by long passes to the wingers.

Gunners were well served by Turner and Brown in the back division, both displaying keen anticipation and positioning themselves well. The goalkeeper, Langridge, made a number of good saves, although he was not as polished as his opposite number, Rogers. On the left-wing Carley played a hard game and was mainly instrumental in making the Gunners' goals. He received admirable support from his partner Thomas, whilst Brown at centre-forward needed close attention throughout.

In the Sappers' side, Spencer played a staunch game at left-back. Time and again he relieved pressure when all appeared lost. N. Jones and Gough of the forwards tried hard and were rewarded by scoring their side's goals. The latter flashed across a number of splendid centres which should have been improved on.

COVENTRY'S NIGHTMARE

Thousands Of Bombs Unloaded By Goering's Murder Squads

After a dog fight over Kent between fighters and enemy machines trying to get through to London. Two wrecks of enemy machines after the fight. (Copyright, Air Mail.)

Earthquake From The Skies: City In A Daze

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

RESCUERS AND FIRE-FIGHTERS ARE STILL STRUGGLING TO BRING A SEMBLANCE OF ORDER TO THE GHASTLY RUINS BLANKETING THE ANCIENT COUNTY TOWN OF COVENTRY AFTER THE NIGHT-LONG GERMAN AIR BOMBARDMENT WHICH INFLICTED AT LEAST 1,000 CASUALTIES AND WIDE DESTRUCTION IN THIS AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURING CENTRE.

The fabled Midland city, scene of Lady Godiva's horseback ride, appears to-day a sprawling smoking skeleton as it emerges from the nightmare of thousands of bombs unloaded by Goering's murder squads, estimated to have numbered 500, for ten and a half hours.

It is asserted that the anti-aircraft barrage prevented the Luftwaffe from accurately attacking any of the aeroplane, motor and other industrial plants.

Their homes and shops have however, been reduced to a grotesque shambles, and thousands of Coventry's 167,000 residents are wandering dazed around the bomb-pitted streets, pitiable aftermath of the worst aerial disaster yet visited on England.

Terrible Havoc

The man-made "earthquake from the skies" shattered four crowded public shelters, several hospitals, hotels, theatres, buildings, churches, stores, clubs and schools.

(Berlin claimed that the "greatest attack in the history of aerial warfare practically wrecked or wiped out" the Armstrong, Standard Motors, Daimler, Hillman and other factories, and said 450 tons of high explosives and 30,000 incendiaries were dropped. The raid, the Nazis added, was in retaliation for the British attack on Munich on Friday last week while Hitler was there).—International News Service.

Mr. Morrison's Visit

Mr. Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, visited Coventry on Friday, touring the most heavily damaged areas.

He was very impressed with the courage of the people.

Later, he discussed what work of repair is to be undertaken, commenting tht the local authorities have taken full and prompt measures to deal with the emergency.

Beaverbrook Also

Yesterday morning's London newspapers published pictures of Coventry Cathedral showing only the walls standing, the inside being a mass of smashed masonry and rubble.—Reuter.

COVENTRY ROUSES HIGH FEELING AGAINST NAZIS

THE HIGH CASUALTY RATE, the destruction of many houses in residential areas in Coventry and the severe damage done to that city's famous cathedral have aroused more intense feelings of antagonism against the Nazis and their methods than any other incident in the indiscriminate aerial bombardment to which London consistently and some provincial cities periodically have been subjected.

While there is no question that industrial plant is a legitimate objective, the wholesale unloading of high explosive and incendiary bombs from aeroplanes unable to penetrate the target area, because of A.A. fire is thought to provide conclusive evidence that while the Nazi crews may be assigned military targets they are also told to strike anywhere in very general areas regardless of what actually will be hit if in any way obstructed from reaching a particular target.

Exasperation

One Nazi explanation of this attack was a "reprisal for the bombing of Munich."

The "Telegraph" says: "Certainly it shows all the symptoms of having been inspired by exasperation. It is undoubtedly reflection of the heaviness of the blows the R.A.F. has been dealing at German industry and military power."

And the "Times": "Why that particular excuse should have been given for this particular attack is not clear.

The enemy has invariably done as much harm as he could by indiscriminate bombing since first he launched the air offensive on this country and it is not for lack of will that he has so far failed to inflict similar casualties and damage upon other places."

Wise Publicity

Full and ready disclosure of the place and extent of damage done—which the "Telegraph" contrasts with the policy of the Nazis, "whose official reports habitually suppress or distort the truth because they dare not confess it to their people"—is universally approved.

The "Times" states the Government have wisely concealed neither the name of the city attacked nor the gravity—from the humanitarian point of view—of the damage caused. For the public will be glad to have a chance to express specifically their pity and admiration for the sufferers of an ordeal heroically endured.—British Wireless.

EMPIRE GIFTS FOR AIRCRAFT

Gifts for aeroplanes continue to pour into London from all over the Empire, it was stated yesterday, when it was announced that India's contribution now totals £1,500,000, as well as £150,000 for air raid relief.

Latest gift for air raid relief is £4,000 from the Maharajah of Mysore.

The Bengal War Fund totals £754,000, a gift of £15,000 being received yesterday from Central Provinces and Bihar to purchase three fighters.

The Ceylon Fund has reached 812,000 rupees, while acknowledgment is made of Malta's gift of two fighters.

Northern Ireland has contributed £85,000 which will purchase 17 fighter aircraft.

Netherlands' Gifts

In the Netherlands East Indies, N.C.O.'s of the Dutch Army have contributed 35,000 guilders to buy a Spitfire.

The Netherlands Trading Company has sent £6,000 to London, while the Netherlands East Indies Fund will soon be able to pay for a second squadron of Spitfires.—Reuter.

JAPANESE WITHDRAWAL

THE CHINESE MILITARY AUTHORITIES IN CHUNGKING YESTERDAY OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THE CONCLUSION OF MILITARY OPERATIONS IN SOUTH KWANGSI FOLLOWING COMPLETION OF THE WITHDRAWAL OF JAPANESE TROOPS FROM NANNING, YAMCHOW AND CHENGNANKWAN.

Chinese troops, it was stated, completed the reoccupation of Yamchow at noon on Thursday.

Some fighting is still going on in the vicinity of Chengnankwan, where the Japanese launched several attacks after the arrival of reinforcements from Langson, in French Indo-China.—Reuter.

CLIPPERS TO GO TO SINGAPORE

British permits have been granted to Pan-American Airways to extend their service to Hong Kong to Singapore, stated a Pan-American official in Washington yesterday.

The company has petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board for authority to extend its service west of Manila and to use Singapore as an additional terminal en route to the Far East.

The company official indicated the new service might have "defense implications".—Reuter.

STRIKE IN U.S. AIRCRAFT FACTORY

Work on $80,000,000 worth of military 'planes has been halted since Friday by a strike at the Vultee Aircraft Company's works at Los Angeles, where 3,800 members of the Committee of Industrial Organisation are demanding a wage increase.

Government officials in Washington said yesterday they were hopeful of an early settlement.—Reuter.

GREEKS COUNTING BOOTY

Describing the Greek successes "The Times" Balkans correspondent wrote from Athens yesterday: "The Greek army is still counting the booty captured.

Up to last night the total was 14 heavy guns, 182 heavy machine-guns, 237 light machine-guns, 36 sub-machine guns, 8,763 rifles, 239 lorries loaded with materials, 373 cases of small arms ammunition, 1,755 shells, 637 mules and 172 horses."

The correspondent continues: "While the Greek offensive has effectively wrested the initiative from the enemy the Greek Air Force as well as the R.A.F. sow confusion in the Italian ranks."

After commenting on the havoc caused by the R.A.F. at Valona and Durazzo the correspondent adds: "Damage already inflicted by the R.A.F. to the landing field at Argyrokastro is important as well as the damage which the Greeks and the R.A.F. have inflicted at Koritza.

The principal landing ground at Koritza is still unfinished for the clayey soil necessitates the sowing of plants to hold the ground together under rain. This has never been done and therefore with the war damage this field will probably become a muddy mess as soon as the rains set in heavily."—British Wireless.

MONASTIR AGAIN BOMBED

The Yugoslavian town of Monastir has been bombed by "unidentified 'planes" for the third time, it was announced in Belgrade yesterday.

For the first time Yugoslav anti-aircraft guns opened fire on the raiders. Damage was slight and there were no casualties.

STOP PRESS

In one district in London, a convent, a Catholic church, two Methodist chapels, a local newspaper office and 30 shops were seriously damaged in Friday night's raids.—Reuter.

In East Anglia, bombs were dropped and people killed, and there were deaths in a south coast town where four bombs destroyed houses and a school.—Reuter.

It was announced in Madrid yesterday that the Spanish Government has rescinded the order prohibiting the despatch of outward news from Spain by American news agency and newspaper correspondents.—Reuter.

Late reports indicated that all four German ships failed in the attempt to reach a Spanish port from Mexico.

In addition to the vessel seen on fire another Nazi ship, the Orinoco, was towed back with engine trouble and the other two are back in port. It is not known what difficulties they encountered.—Reuter.

Hoover Renews Food Plan

Yesterday he appealed to the belligerents for a safe conduct for food ships to Europe. All the German-occupied countries are on his list except France.

Mr. Hoover said it would cost the American people nothing as the food could be paid for out of frozen assets in the United States.

There is enough food for the whole of Europe if the Germans distribute it fairly; in addition there is no guarantee if food is allowed through that it will not be seized by the Germans.—Reuter.

A BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN:—

Buster's Barre

By Howard R. Garis

JINGLE and Jangle were quarreling as to which should have the one rocking chair. Jangle was in it, but Jingle tipped her out.

This made Buster unhappy. For the little rabbit boy had been left in charge of his twin sisters. And when they quarreled over the rocking chair he didn't know what to do.

But all of a sudden he said he would make another rocking chair. Then each of the twins could have one.

"But how are you going to do it?" asked Jangle.

"I'll show you," said Buster.

"You are not going to cut my rocking chair in half, are you?" asked Jingle. "I won't let you." She sat in it very tight.

"No, I will not cut this rocking chair," said Buster. "But I will put rockers on this other chair." He pointed to a chair that had four legs but no rockers.

Suspicious

"Then will that be my chair?" asked Jangle.

"Yes," said Buster, "it will. Now I am going out in the yard and get some rockers to put on your chair, Jangle."

"I'll come and watch you," said Jangle.

"You may come also, if you like, Jingle," said Buster.

Buster hammered on the barrel.

"No, thank you, I don't like," said Jingle. "I think it's all a trick. You just want to get me out of my rocking chair so Jangle can get in it. You can't fool me!"

"I am not going to try to fool you, Jingle," said Buster. "Truly I am going to make another rocking chair for Jangle."

"Well, I'll believe it when I s it," said Jingle and she rocke harder than ever.

"Can you really make me rocking chair out of a four-legg chair?" asked Jangle. She w hopping behind her brother o into the yard of Uncle Wiggily hollow stump bungalow.

"Yes, I can make it," said Bu ter. "I am a Rabbit Scout, y know, and I can do lots of things

"Yes, I know you can," sa Jangle. "But what are you goi to use to make rockers for m chair?"

"I am going to use a barrel Buster answered.

"A barrel!" exclaimed Jangl She wrinkled up her little nos She was trying to make it twink like Uncle Wiggily's. "How ca you make a rocking chair out barrel, Buster?"

"I'll show you," said the rabb boy. "There's a barrel back of t garage. I'll get a hammer in t garage and you shall soon ha a rocking chair of your own. The you and Jingle will not quarrel."

Buster's Accident

"Oh, I didn't quarrel. It w just Jingle," said Jangle.

Buster didn't say anything. H found a hammer in the garage an soon he and Jangle were standin beside an empty barrel. It w on top of a little hill back of t garage.

"This is what I am going to do said Buster. "I will knock som hoops off this old barrel. I wi saw the hoops in half. I will na half a hoop on each side of t four-legged chair and the ha hoops will be just like rockers

Buster hammered on the barre He knocked in some of the stave or long side pieces, so he cou take off the hoops. But, all of sudden Buster gave the hamm such a hard swing that he didn hit anything. And the next mo ment he fell inside the barrel. An the barrel started to roll down hi with Buster inside.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" screamed Jangl

And if the toothbrush doesn start aching in the night and c to have the radio turned on, I tell you about everybody bei happy.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

PLAYING duplicate bridge, a declarer must not allow himself to become elated when he discovers that he is about to bring home his contract. There may be an extra trick lurking in the bushes which, for match-point purposes, is almost as valuable as the contract itself. In to-day's hand declarer was so pleased to drop a certain vital jack and fulfill his contract that he played foolishly thereafter.

South, dealer.
Match-point duplicate.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spads	Pass
1 no trump	Pass	2 d'monds	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's second bid [one no trump] is worthy of note. Undoubtedly South's four honour tricks made this an underbid but, nevertheless, it was the best action available at this point. There are times in the preliminary stages of bidding when it is wise to understate one's values, when the only alternative is to overstate them. In this case South had to choose between a one and a two no trump rebid. The former, as noted, would not express South's four honour tricks, but the latter, would be erring even farther in the other direction. The reasoning which dictated South's choice was perfectly sound: if North could not make another bid over one no trump there hardly could be a good play for game. A glance at the North hand confirms this reasoning. Surely, with all that North held, it would have been inexcusable for him to pass, and his two diamond bid was the logical second response. Yes, despite all he held, declarer needed a certain amount of luck to bring home his contract.

West, whose only suit length was in the opponents' bid suits, decided to open a low club. Declarer properly put up the ten, hoping the lead was from the Q-J, but East played the queen and declarer won with the ace. A low diamond was led to the queen. East won and returned his original fourth best club. Declarer ducked; West won and returned the jack. Declarer now led another low diamond to the ace, discovering West's void, and picked up East's diamond ten on the return. With three diamond and two club tricks home, declarer would need all four of his hearts to insure the contract and felt very dubious about the drop of the jack. But neither did he feel like "breaking" the spade suit in an attempt to guess the position of the adverse honours, so he decided to try for the drop of the jack. He led low to the queen and back to his ace, joyfully smothering East's jack, then cashed his two remaining hearts. East had discarded two clubs on declarer's last two hearts. Now, with only two cards left in all hands, declarer led a spade and, when West played low, put in dummy's jack without a second's thought. East pounced on the trick with the queen and returned a spade to his partner's ace.

Of course it always is nice to bring home a contract, but at match-point duplicate extra tricks are nice, too. At the twelfth trick, when declarer played the spade toward dummy and put in the jack, he was guilty of a serious error. He was making a play that had absolutely nothing to gain and everything to lose. Consider, if East had had the spade ace, declarer would have had no chance to make a spade trick, because in that case East merely would have held on to a good club and blanked the spade ace. Surely he would not throw away an established club trick to keep the ace and a low spade. Thus, the only chance was to find the spade ace in West's hand, where it actually was, and to put up the spade king for the extra trick. Incidentally, this extra trick would have given declarer an additional three match-points, which are hardly to be sneezed at in the average duplicate game.

MODERNISE YOUR IDEAS AS YOU MODERNISE YOUR WARDROBES

Many women are greatly concerned about keeping "up to date" in fashion. They wear their hair in the latest coiffure, they buy smart new clothes, and they know which shade of lipstick or nail polish was the last to appear on the cosmetic counter. In order to appear young, they exercise or are massaged to attractive slimness—but they forget to discard or modernise their old-fashioned ideas! They may look modern but in talking with them you discover they have not advanced mentally for a decade or two!

To be current, a woman must think with the era. Looking modern is not enough. Each generation advances and unless we advance with it we are bound to be considered behind the times, and a bit of a bore.

Let us, for instance, just run over a few outmoded ideas. Check yourself on them. Do you still believe in these?

Air travel is not safe and has no future.

A girl should never telephone a boy and ask him to be her guest.

A woman should let nature take its course. If she is stout at 40, she was intended to grow stout.

If a woman is a good mother and wife, that is all society can expect of her. She shouldn't have to keep up on world events, art, literature, etc.

Every child should honour his parents even though they may have failed him miserably.

If you still agree with all these ideas you must turn over a new leaf. Time marches on and we must march with it. What seemed wrong a generation ago is accepted, through more tolerant analysis, this generation. Modernise your thinking and be truly young!

Beauty's Three

Solomon might better have named his attributes by three. Among the charms of every beautiful woman, there must be three that are white—the skin, the teeth, the hands, three that are red—the mouth, the cheeks, the nails; three long—the body, the ears, the hands; three broad—the bosom, the forehead, the space between the eyebrows; three full—the lips, the arms, the calves; three small—the waist, the hands, the feet; three thin—the fingers, the ankles, the wrists, and, finally three dark — the eyes, the eyelashes, and the soul — if she chances to have one.—FRANK CROWNINSHIELD in Vogue.

Americans Evacuate

60 evacuees from Japan, 300 more Honolulu.

A job for the Shanghai Customs. Baggage piled high as American women and children leave Shanghai for the United States.

EPHAZONE
Breaks Choking Grip of Asthma

EPHAZONE is the quickest safest remedy science has ever discovered for asthma. In 30 seconds Ephazone breaks the worst attack ever.

The speed and safety of EPHAZONE are due to its concentrating action on the THREE MASTER SYMPTOMS of asthma—ever present symptoms which must be overcome before relief is possible.

They are (1) the nervous constriction of your air passages, (2) the flow of thick mucus in half-closed "tubes" and (3) that dreadful fixing of your diaphragm, the breathing muscle of your chest.

EPHAZONE

overcomes the MASTER SYMPTOMS of Asthma in 30 seconds. EPHAZONE acts as soon as it reaches the stomach. It stops constriction, liquefies phlegm and releases the diaphragm, which allows air to flow rhythmically in and out of your lungs. What a boon! What quick relief for YOU!!

The Club of Abandoned Husbands

By

Christopher Morley

Author of "Where the Blue Begins," etc.

(With apologies for changing certain lines to suit our own purpose).

Ajax—Hullo, Socrates, what are you doing patrolling the streets at this late hour? Surely it would be more seemly to be at home?

Socrates—In the sense of a place of habitation, a dormitory, of course I still have a home; but it is merely an abandoned shell, a dark and silent place devoid of allure. My family have been evacuated to Australia, good Ajax; and the lonely apartment, with all the blinds pulled down and nothing in the ice box, is a dismal haunt. That is why I wander upon the highway.

Ajax—I, too, know that condition, Socrates, and upon my word I am having a doleful time of it. The quaint part of it is that before my wife left I had secretly thought that a little bachelorhood would be a most interesting change. I rather liked the idea of strolling about in the evenings, observing the pageant of human nature in my quiet way, dropping in at the club or the hotel, and mingling with my fellow men in a fashion that the husband and father does not often have opportunity to do. I had often complained about having to help put the children to bed when I got home from the office. I grudged the time it took to get them safely bestowed. But I now find that about six o'clock in the evening, the hour when I would normally be hastening home to wife and babes, is a most poignant time. I am horribly homesick. When I do get back to my forlorn apartment, the mere sight of little Priam's crib is enough to reduce me to tears. I am seriously thinking of writing a poem about it.

Socrates—What is needed is a Club for Abandoned Husbands, for the consolation of those whose families are away.

Ajax—I have never found a club of much assistance at such a time. It is always full of rather elderly men who talk a great deal and in a manner both doleful and ill-informed.

Socrates—But this would be a club of quite a different sort. It would be devised to offer a truly domestic atmosphere to those who have sent their wives and juveniles to Australia.

Socrates—It would not be difficult. In the first place, there would be a large nursery, with a number of rented children of various ages. Each member of the club hastening thither from his office at the conclusion of the day's work, would be privileged to pick out some child as nearly as possible similar in age and sex to his own absent offspring. He would then deal with this child according to the necessities of its condition. If it were an extremely young infant, a bottle properly prepared would be ready in the club kitchen, and he could administer it. The club bathroom would be filled with hilarious members on their knees beside small tubs, bathing such urchins as needed it. Others would be playing games on the floor, or tucking the children in bed. It ought to be quite feasible to hire a number of children for this purpose. During the day they would be cared for by a competent matron. Baby carriages would be provided, and if any of the club members felt so inclined they could take the children for an airing over the week-end.

Ajax—This is a brave idea, Socrates. And then, when all the children were bedded for the night, how would the domestic atmosphere be simulated?

Socrates — Nothing simpler. After dinner such husbands as are accustomed to washing the dishes would be allowed to do so in the club kitchen. During the day it would be the function of the matron to think up a number of odd jobs to be performed in the course of the evening. Pictures would be hung, clocks wound, a number of tin cans would be waiting to be opened with refractory can openers, and there would always be several window blinds that had gone wrong. A really resourceful matron could devise any number of ways of making the club seem just like home. One night she would discern a smell of gas, the next there might be a hole in the fly-screens, or a little carpentering to do, or a caster broken under the piano. Husbands with a turn for plumbing would find the club basement a perpetual place of solace, with a fresh leak or a rumbling pipe every few days.

Ajax—Admirable! And if the matron really wanted to make the members feel at home she would take a turn through the building every now and then, to issue a gentle rebuke for cigar ashes dropped on the rugs or feet elevated on chairs.

Socrates—The really crowning touch, I think, would lie in the ice-box raids. A large ice box would be kept well stocked with remainders of apple pie, macaroni, stewed prunes, and chocolate pudding. Any husband, making a cautious inroad upon these about midnight, would surely have the authentic emotion of being in his own home.

Socrates—Of course the success of the scheme would depend greatly on finding the right person for matron. If she were to strew a few hairpins about and perhaps misplace a latchkey now and then. . . .

Ajax—Socrates, you have hit upon a great idea. But you ought to extend the membership of the club to include young men not yet married. Think what an admirable training school for husbands it would make!

Socrates—My dear fellow, let us not discuss it any further. It makes me too homesick. I am going back to my lonely apartment to write a letter to dear Xanthippe.

Two War Loans have been floated in Canada and in each case the Sun Life has been the largest individual subscriber. The subscription to the first loan was Can.$7,500,000 (of which only 40% was allowed), and to the second just recently issued, Can.$10,000,000 (of which 75% has been allowed). During the first year of hostilities the Company has contributed in Canada alone a total of Can.$10,500,000 to the Empire's effort, and in addition, surplus funds in Great Britain have been invested in British War Loans to the extent of £390,000. We feel this is a record of which we may be justly proud.

The person who buys insurance with the Sun Life to-day is serving a dual purpose; in the first place he is providing needed protection for his home, and in the second, is supporting one or other of the Empire Governments as directly as though he put the premiums into War Loan since our Company is subscribing to War Loans far more than is being collected through new premiums.

Friendship In A Cup!

COFFEE is the greatest pleasure and the greatest vice of the Albanians. In the larger houses there is a special coffee kitchen; every hour huge cups of the loveliest black brew are served; if you go shopping you are first of all offered coffee and cigarettes—this is just as much a part of the service which the shop tenders as the chair on which you are expected to sit, or the greeting you must exchange with the smiling assistant even if you don't understand a word he says.

It is impossible to refuse this hospitality nor would it be wise to do so. It would be construed as a brutal insult; an insult to the hospitality which is considered in Albania the hollest thing in human intercourse, and which is even mightier than the vendetta or "blood revenge."

If someone kills your child in Albania and flees to your house to find refuge, you cannot deliver him into the hands of the police; nor can you take revenge, at once, into your hands. You must keep him as a most honoured guest for six weeks, provide him with all necessities and even luxuries. Then he will leave because he, too, knows the laws of hospitality. Then and only then you may shoot him—in the back if you prefer—but not before he has left your house and is beyond the borders of your hospitality. — ANTOINETTE SZINYEI-MERSE in "The Authorised Story of King Zog and Queen Geraldine," (Hutchinson).

TOO WISE

The president of a big bank had a six-year-old son who was beginning to ask embarrassing questions. When the father took him to the circus the lad was fascinated by some of the Ubangi savages. Their black skin, showing above their costumes, for some reason interested him more than anything else. In fact he could not take his eyes off one of the big-lipped belles.

Pulling his father aside he asked: "Are they black all over, father?"

"Yes, my son," replied the banker.

"Gee, pop, you know everything," came back the lad.

NOTHING EVER HAPPENS

"Whatever happened to the little girl in cotton stockings?"

"Nothing."

THAT EXPLAINED IT

Grandma: "Yes, I feel much better now, and I don't think there is anything wrong with my appendix. But it was nice of the minister to call and see about it."

Daughter: "But, mother, that wasn't the new minister, that was a specialist from the city who examined you."

Grandma: "Oh, he was a doctor, was he? I thought he was a little familiar for a minister."

CONCLUSION

"Ah don' know. Fo' o' five. Ah guess."

"No."

Then the first lad got an inspiration. "Does yo' evah do any thinkin' about women?" he asked.

"No."

"Then yo' is fo'," was the triumphant conclusion.

BIG BUSINESS

The scene was a small theatre in a provincial town. A melodrama was being played to an audience of factory workers enjoying a well-deserved respite.

The heroine, lured all unsuspecting to the villain's lair, has just realised with horror that his intentions were anything but honorable. Swiftly she snatched up a handy carving-knife.

"Stand back, you unspeakable cad, or you will rue this hour!" she cried defiantly. "I may be only a poor, weak feminine creature—but, Heaven, I will sell my honour dearly!"

WISE TO IT

The recruit was a simple-looking lad from the country, so the sergeant thought he would pull his leg.

"Here, my lad," he said, "let's see how far you can climb up that searchlight."

"Ah, you can't catch me," said the recruit. "I know that trick. As soon as I get half-way up you'll turn out the light!"

BUILT FOR TWO

A traveller connected with a cycle company was expecting an "interesting event" in the family, and before going away asked the nurse to wire: "Gent's model arrived" if a boy came, and "Lady's model" if a girl.

The wire he received staggered him. There was one word "Tandem."

THE RUSE

"Folks," said the coloured minister, "the subject of my sermon this evening am 'Liars.' How many in the congregation has done read the 69th chapter of Matthew?"

TECHNICALLY SPEAKING

A prominent local man entered a third class railway carriage and sat down hurriedly next to a little girl. After a short time, he realised he was sitting on a newspaper.

"Is this your paper?" he asked the child. "Yes," she replied.

She said no more until leaving the carriage, when she said meekly: "Please, sir, may I have my fish and chips?"

"And how's de wife," enquired Sambo kindly.

"Jus' fine. But de funny thing is ah went to de pictures de other day and done seen de Dione quintuplets. Now ma wife done give birth to quins."

POTPOURRI

The chances of submarines securing U-boats got so reasonable towards 1918 that the "R" class of British submarine was designed especially for the work. They were the only underwater vessels designed to be faster below water than on the surface, 15 and 9½ knots respectively, and had six torpedo tubes, with particularly large compensating tanks, in their bow for firing salvos of torpedos. They did not come into the Service until it was too late to give them a chance to prove their worth, but the plans remain and have probably been kept up to date; they could be built very quickly indeed, and had the late war lasted for a few months longer the U-boats would have been forced to run the gauntlet of a large number of "Little Arthurs" as the Navy called them. —FRANK BOWEN in The Sphere, London.

Other factors being equal, cancer of the breast is more common among professional women who bear an average of 2.8 children than among the wives of unskilled labourers who usually have four or five offspring. Backing up the general rule of the lower the birth rate in a given group, the higher the breast-cancer rate, are the records for spinsters over 54, who become victims of this disease much more frequently than married women. (One possible reason for this situation: mothers of the poorer classes usually feed their babies in Nature's way; women of higher social ranking often shun the chore of nursing, and single women—except in cases of illegitimate births — have no chance to take over the natural functions of breast feeding.) —Newsweek, New York.

It is a common assumption that the peace failed because Germany suffered under grievances which she was not allowed to redress by war, and that our next peace will succeed if we treat her justly and give her no ground for grievance.

Such a view indicates a failure to understand the nature of our problem, for it assumes that wars arise because nations have specific grievances, such as those we had with France at the end of the nineteenth century, about Madagascar, Fashoda, Newfoundland, etc

On the eve of the Great War, the late Sir Edward Grey, as he then was, said, "I can settle with France because we have differences which we can discuss and adjust. I cannot settle with Germany because we have no differences with her at all."—Norman Angell in "For What Do We Fight?" (Harper).

Then there is one about Hitler visiting the Westwall and telling the troops, "Boys, I'm going to go back to your homes and take your greetings to the folks there." "Fuehrer," the men are supposed to have shouted, "wir folgen dir!" ("Fuehrer, we follow you!") Another one has the Austrians, who once said, "Wir swollen Heim ins Reich" ("We want to return home to the Reich"), now crying, "Wir wollen Heims, uns reicht's!" ("We want to go home; we've got enough!") Finally, Stalin is said to be writing a book whose title will be "Sein Kampf, Mein Sieg" ("His Struggle, My Victory").

It was found that these people, had an excess of acid waste products in their blood during sleep.

A BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN:—

EVERYBODY'S HAPPY

By Howard R. Garis

FASTER and faster, over and over, down the hill rolled Buster inside the barrel.

"Help! Help! Help!" cried Jangle his sister. The little rabbit girl was hopping up and down on top of the hill. The hill was back of Uncle Wiggily's garage. It was a steep hill. That's why Buster was rolling so fast, inside the barrel.

Buster had fallen inside an old barrel. He was trying to knock some hoops off the barrel. Buster was going to saw some hoops in two halves and put them on a four-legged chair to make a rocker for his little rabbit sister.

"Oh, Buster! Come back! Come back!" cried Jangle. She was still jumping up and down like a potato masher.

But Buster did not come back. In the first place he did not hear Jangle calling to him. The barrel he was in made such loud and rumbling sounds that the little rabbit boy inside it could hear nothing else.

In the second place, all wrapped up as he was inside the barrel, and with the barrel rolling down hill, Buster could not have come back if he had wanted to. And he wanted to.

"It's luck you weren't hurt."

Rabbit Wants Help

"I don't want to go on rolling down hill in a barrel," said Buster to himself. "There is no telling what may happen when I get to the bottom of the hill. I wish some one would help me."

So Buster began calling as loudly as he could:

"Help! Help! Help!"

On top of the hill, jumping up and down, Jangle also called:

"Help! Help! Help!"

But Jangle could not call with a very loud voice. She had to use part of her breath to jump with. However, she called loudly enough for Uncle Wiggily to hear her. The jolly old rabbit gentleman hopped out of his bungalow.

"What's the matter, Jangle?" he asked.

"Oh, Buster fell in a barrel and he's rolling down hill!", said Jangle.

"Why did Buster do such a queer thing as that?" asked Uncle Wiggily. He had come home from the picnic where all the other rabbit children were to get some more ice cream. Jingle, Jangle and Buster hadn't gone to the picnic because they were just getting over chickenpox, which is catching.

"Buster was going to use the barrel hoops to make rockers for a chair for me," Jangle explained. "Then he fell inside the barrel and it rolled down hill."

"Well, don't worry," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'll run down hill after Buster and get him out of the barrel."

Barrel Runs Too Fast

Uncle Wiggily started running down hill. But the barrel, with Buster in it, rolled much faster. All of a sudden the barrel rolled against a tree and broke all to pieces. Buster was spilled out but he wasn't hurt the least bit.

"Ha! Ha!" he laughed as he jumped up and twinkled his nose. "Now I won't have to knock the barrel apart to get the hoops. The barrel knocked itself apart."

"It's lucky you weren't hurt," said Uncle Wiggily. Then he helped Buster saw the hoops. They were nailed on the four-legged chair which at once turned into a rocker. So Jingle and Jangle could each rock as much as they wished and everybody was happy.

And if the jumping rope doesn't try to hop over the church steeple and get tangled in the weather vane, I'll tell you next about the song lesson.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WHEN a certain play has nothing to lose and everything to gain it goes without saying that it must be the right play. In to-day's hand a game contract was "sneaked home" by declarer's observing this principle—and getting a little co-operation from the enemy!

D—A 6 2
C—A 9 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Double	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

It should be noted that North's three spade bid was not forcing in this instance because it was made directly over a take-out double. Ordinarily a single jump raise of partner's bid suit is forcing to game, but when such a raise is given over a take-out double its logical implication is that the bidder dare not permit the free exchange of information between the opponents; that he has a fairly strong supporting hand for partner's bid, but virtually no defensive values, and that he therefore is attempting to shut out the fourth hand. As it happened, the opponents could not have made high contract, but North, of course, could not know that.

West opened the heart king. Declarer won and made a rapid survey of his resources. It was obvious that at least one trick in spades, hearts, and diamonds would have to be lost and if, as the bidding indicated, the spade queen were in West's hand the contract was doomed. No squeeze, throw-in play, or other advanced type of coup offered the slightest encouragement and, after only a moment's thought, declarer concluded that his only hope lay in the successful execution of a ruse. Thus, at the second trick, instead of showing the club ace and ruffing his losing clubs in dummy, declarer deliberately led a low club toward dummy's jack. West "fell"! It simply did not occur to him that declared would give up a club trick if he held the ace. Hence, he did not think twice about putting up an honour, but quickly ducked, expecting East to take dummy's jack with the ace. To his immense chagrin, not to say mortification, dummy's club jack held and it soon was brought home to West that he had conceded the contract. A spade was led to the ten spot and taken with the queen. Now West attempted to cash two heart tricks. Declarer, however, followed for only one round and ruffed the second, then cashed the club ace, discarding a diamond from dummy. After that, declarer could spread the hand, concede the trump ace, and claim the balance.

Obviously, from declarer's point of view, there was absolutely nothing to lose and everything to gain by leading away from the club ace toward dummy's jack. It was too much to expect that the jack would hold, but it was the only hope and, in any case, the play could not be a loser. Declarer always could discard one of dummy's diamonds on his own club ace, so that later card would not be wasted, and if by chance he could convert the club jack into a trick [as actually happened] the club ace would be doing double duty.

From West's point of view it was quite another matter. I grant that West had reason to feel that the club ace was in East's hand. But what of it? In that case West could well afford to put up one of his own honours. It was not as though there were any pressing need to put East on lead for some vital return. West could continue hearts on his own accord just as safely as by waiting for East to lead through declarer Thus, it is indisputable that West made an error. But this does not detract from South's vision in having selected the one play that had any chance, however slight, for success.

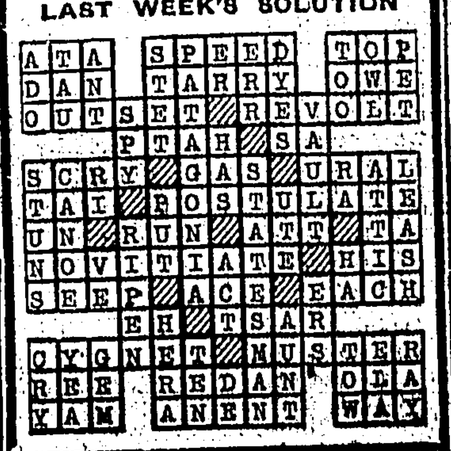
LAST WEEK'S SOLUTION



Hollywood Fashion Pre-View

Listen to designer Vera West's word for the ancient Greeks, and to what Travis Banton says about the hat that wasn't there.

By Lorna Farrel

HAVE you ever, gazing into your mirror, thought you were a perfect mess? Have you then begun to wish you looked like Ginger Rogers, Carole Lombard or some other Hollywood lovely? It would cheer you to watch the Hollywood stars gazing into their own mirrors, regretting the shapes of their eyes, lips or faces. For there is no such thing as a perfect beauty. Author of this statement is Mel Berns, head of the make-up department at RKO Radio Studios.

Says Mr. Berns: The perfect beauty, even if she did exist, would be in no particular demand in Hollywood. What's wanted is the unusual face, the one that is remembered. Wise stars emphasise either their best points for glamour or their irregular features for personality.

The first thing you notice about Ginger Rogers, for instance, is her eyes, Mr. Berns continues. These are accented by a touch of mascara on the lashes and an occasional use of eye shadow. Her brows, naturally heavy and nicely curved, are left alone. A thin plucked line would be too distracting.

Among those who capitalise on their most irregular features are Katharine Hepburn with her high cheek bones and Greta Garbo, whose heavy straight hair made the long bob famous. A good example, too, is Carole Lombard. She boldly sweeps her hair off her high forehead and deepens the hollows in her cheeks, thus achieving that peculiar, elusive quality you envy. So read your fortune in the stars and rejoice in that turned-up nose or pugnacious jaw of yours.

An invitation to a dinner-dance finds Joan Crawford, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, smartly gowned in a peasant skirt of water-taffeta, and neck-revealing blouse of corded crepe. Long sleeves, stiffly padded at the shoulders, give width to the narrowed waistline.

MILLINERY NEWS

Incidentally, if you want an advance peek at what you will be wearing on top of your head, see Virginia Field in RKO Radio's Dance Girl Dance. It's a flat stiff-crowned beret, made of oxford grey wool, cut in ten pie-shaped sections. Very smart. Another bit of millinery news is the amusing birds, which designers are fashioning these days, of ribbon, leather or even modern plastics.

Paulette Goddard, whom you will see in Paramount's North West Mounted Police, is one of Hollywood's best dressed stars. Paulette predicts the return of the cocktail gown for the coming season. This should be black, long, ankle or street length and very discreetly trimmed with almost anything that glitters.

GRECIAN TREND

Indicative of a new and beautiful trend are the Grecian styled gowns originated by Vera West for Irene Hervey, Martha Raye, and Rosemary Lane in Universal's The Boys From Syracuse. Decorations based on Grecian motifs and worked in copper, bronze or gold are combined with artfully draped sleeves and mantles. These effects offer notes of importance to modern dress designers. Inspired by her costumes in this production, Irene Hervey introduces a formal gown of white crepe roma, modernised with a high neckline and long sleeves, decorated with copper metallic leaves.

Martha Raye, too, is adapting one of her costumes to modern use. This is a black crepe tailored dinner gown with a long fitted jacket over a straight full-length skirt. The jacket is embroidered with an outline of "The Wall of Troy" in red soutache braid. In perfect accord with modern modes is the Grecian mantle worn by Rosemary Lane in The Boys From Syracuse. It consists of a wide rectangle of the same heavy green crepe as the gown, caught on one shoulder to resemble a wing-shaped sleeve. Rosemary uses the same idea to take the place of a shawl with a blue chiffon evening gown. And when stars begin adapting their costumes to their own wardrobes, it's time to sit up and take notice.

KEEP YOUR HAT ON

In the 20th Century-Fox picture The Man I Married, Joan Bennett visits Nazi Germany. She is the only well dressed woman in the cast, since all the other women in conformity with Hitler's edict against cosmetics and fashions, content themselves with sweaters, blouses, and skirt. What a setting for our Joan!

Travis Banton, who designed the clothes for The Man I Married, does a Hitler himself against the current hatless vogue especially for those women who are not only miles but years from the nearest campus. After all, the hat is the period to the costume sentence and a hatless woman is simply an unfinished job. It's a sign of the times, just as the skimpy flapper skirts were a symbol of post-war nerves. All the more reason, thinks Mr. Banton, to keep your hat on your head.

PROPHETIC HAIR-DO

For a prophetic hair-do, see Samuel Goldwyn's The Westerner, in which Lillian Bond wears bangs with a Grecian coil at the neckline. I'm inclined to say I told you so. Lillian, as Lily Langtry, one of the first glamour girls on record, wears eight elaborate costumes in this picture, many of them exact copies of dresses worn in the '60's.

Orry Kelly created four dresses with draped skirts for Rosalind Russell to wear in the Warner Brothers production No Time for Comedy. This is important fashion news, so don't miss Rosalind. Another trick worth watching, says designer Orry Kelly, is the slim-but-full silhouette, which sounds like a paradox but can easily be achieved by a combination of slim skirt with large hip pockets or blousy top. Some skirts are pulled to one side in a drape to achieve a hidden fullness.

Fringe also is making its appearance in Hollywood. Note the box coat Genevieve Tobin wears in this same picture. The fringe is set in five-inch tiers from a yoke of white flannel serge.

Hark to this description of Hollywood's newest fur models: elbow length cape sleeves on a waist length jacket, kidskin cardigans, plaid-lined and with a collar of the same material, fitted knee-length coats, boxy beaver jackets with large pockets.

Black velvet with leopard is a new note for evening. Heddy Lamarr wears this wrap in a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. The Peter Pan collar of leopard and the enormous muff dramatise the simplicity of a simply flared swagger coat in velvet.

The Coming Empire of Israel

THERE are 3,000,000 English speaking people, who as a group, are unperturbed by the perilous position that England and the Empire are in to-day. They are steadfastly certain that despite serious temporary setbacks, England will win the war and lead the nations in the construction of a brave and just new world.

These calm, confident people are the British-Israelites who have followers in every country where English is spoken. Their one article of faith is the literal acceptance of the Bible. They claim that the Bible as its stands carries information not otherwise possessed by humanity. It is the key to the hazy past before human history began, as well as the divining rod of the future to which humanity has not yet attained.

One of the most important of their revelations, is that the members of Anglo-Saxon race are the direct descendants of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel, and that the King of England is descended from the Davidic line. As such, the English people are to enjoy the fulfilment of the many promises made to the Children of Israel. They are destined to blaze the trail for the coming society—a theocratic state, governed by the economic and political laws contained explicitly in the Bible.

Quoting chapter and verse, British-Israelites give a thousand proofs to illustrate the efficacy of the Bible as a source of prophecy. Their literature claims that earthquakes, floods, famines, dictatorships, abdications and revolutions have all been clearly foretold. In addition, automobiles, aeroplanes, super-highways, bombings from the air and other things peculiar to our modern scene were foretold by the ancient Biblical writings.

The British-Israel World Foundation is neither a church nor a sect; it is a federation of orthodox Christians of all denominations who accept the prophetic findings from the Bible. Thus, it supplements rather than supplants existing religions. It is not unusual to find ministers of the Methodist, Anglican or Presbyterian Churches playing an active role in the dissemination of the prophetic teachings. With headquarters opposite the Buckingham Palace in London, the movement is governed by a General Council, who supervise and direct the activities of numerous local organisations throughout the world. The nominal leaders of the branch organisations in Canada, Australia, United States and other English-speaking countries, are commissioners who keep in close touch with London, England. The entire movement is financed by the voluntary contributions of followers.

Among the ranks of the British-Israelites can be found men and women of all ages, of all occupations. The men heavily outnumber the women, probably because the scientific, rational approach of the movement has a greater appeal for the male mind. The leaders are recruited from divers places. Many prominent names grace the rostrum of members. Her Majesty Queen Victoria and King Edward VII were interested participants, while the Duchess of Athlone, wife of the present Governor-General of Canada, is one of British-Israel's best known living friends.

British-Israel truths are brought to light by a staff of research workers who are always searching every nook and cranny of the Bible. The important finding that the British are the Lost Tribes of Israel, for example, is based largely on the fact that every prophecy concerning Israel is fulfilled in the British race. Here are a few of the promises given, and completed, according to the British-Israelites:

"They were to be a company of nations. (Gen. xxxv, 11: 'be fruitful and multiply; a nation and company of nations shall be of thee.') Such is the present British Empire, a Commonwealth of Nations."

"They were to possess strategic military points, which would put their enemies at their mercy. (Gen. 22:17: 'And thy seed will possess the gate of his enemies.') Who possesses the strategic vital points of Gibraltar, Malta, Suez, Singapore, Aden and the Falkland Islands?"

"Israel always marched in a hollow square around the Ark. Does history record any modern nation, besides the British, who always fought and camped in a square where practicable?"

> The English people are direct descendants of the Lost Tribes of Israel and, as such, will enjoy the fulfilment of the many promises made to the Children of Israel. They are destined to blaze the trail for the coming society—a theocratic state. Such is the steadfast belief of the British-Israelites who quote chapter and verse as proof to illustrate the efficacy of the Bible as a source of prophecy.

"They were to inherit the earth's 'desolate heritages.' (Isaiah). Was it not the British who developed North America, Australia, Egypt and India?"

Further reasons for believing Israel and the British alike are to be found in the modern English weights and measures standard, the monarchy, the state official seal, and the penny.

While the Bible is the fundamental and undisputed source of all prophecy, according to the British-Israelites there are symbols which corroborate the findings therein. Of these, the Great Pyramid of Gizeh in Egypt is the most significant. It is said to contain, "inscriptions of the heavenly spheres and figures representing the stars and planets; the position of the stars and cycles, together with the history and chronicle of time past and what is to come." Subtly, the predictions are not found in writing but in the measurements of the various parts of the pyramid. Nor can the dilettante, versed in one or two branches of science, ever hope to wrest historical secrets from the tons of ancient stone; rather, that task requires the efforts of the exceptionally astute and profound scholar. Thus, Davis Davidson, one of the most articulate of pyramidic prognosticators, is an English scholar and engineer who devoted years of his life mastering mathematics, Egyptology, architecture, astronomy, history, physics and Biblical study. By considering the number of inches between certain chambers in the pyramid, Davidson was able to make the following typical analysis:

"The Age of Speed began in 1844 with the passing of the Bank Charter Act, which led to the rapid development of industry. The Age of Acceleration began in 1909 when mass production methods were introduced. It was indicated that this would lead to the destruction of the present industrial system."

What of the future? Between precisely September 16th 1936, and January, 1947, lies the critical time. Civilisation will collapse, and another will arise to take its place. During this period, the countries will be in "an economic wilderness," but will finally rally behind the governments of Britain and the U.S.A. to introduce the theocratic form of government.

The British-Israelites spare no details when they describe what they mean by the theocratic state. First and foremost, the countries must accept Christ as King. In the economic sphere, usury, (interest) would be done away with, and debts would be cancelled every seven years. Money would serve, not as a commodity, but only as a medium of exchange. Politically, the democratic system would be maintained, with the difference that a new spirit of charity and altruism would dominate both the governing and governed. All these principles of government and economics are derived directly from the Bible.

Although less important than the "Great Pyramid," there are other symbols that link the past with the present. The Union Jack for example, is really the "union of Jacob." The United States are really the 13th tribe of Israel, Manasseh, because the number 13 is mysteriously interwoven with American history. The eagle on the American seal has 13 arrows in one talon and 13 branches of olive in the other. The mottos "E Pluribus Unum" and "Annuit Coepits" each have 13 letters. Similarly, the first flag that Washington raised at Cambridge, Mass., in 1776 had 13 stars!

British-Israel writers keep well abreast of current events. In February, 1939, at a time when Communism and Fascism were bitterly opposed to each other, an article in the British-Israel magazine intimated that the 38th and 39th chapter of Ezekiel called for a Russian-German alliance. In April of the same year, when Germany violated Moravia, the same publication observed, "The newspapers commented that Chamberlain is shocked, and England and France are angry. Yet, had our Anglo-Saxons known the Bible they would have saved themselves the humiliation of Munich. Let us not be deceived. Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland will not escape." A year or so later, when the Nazi juggernaut started rolling, most of these did not escape.

Earthquakes are always regarded as of special importance because they are sure to accompany the return of Christ to earth. The circumstances attendant upon that event are described as follows: "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be earthquakes in divers places." That is why the severe quakes in Turkey in December last year, and the frequent repetition of tremours in other parts of the world since then, have aroused so much discussion in British-Israel circles.

A certain amount of significance is also attached to the discovery that the worm trichina spiralis, which is the cause of trichinosis, is found to exist only in pigs, and consequently, the disease is caused by the consumption of pork. The meat of the pig was always forbidden, according to the old Mosaic laws found in the Bible.

The British-Israelites interpret excerpts from the Bible as having reference to the modern scene. Thus, we are told that Hitler's Berchtesgaden retreat did not escape attention 4,500 years ago. Jeremiah 49:16 reveals that, "Thy terribleness hath deceived thee and the pride of the heart. O thou that dwellest in the clefs of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill; though thou shouldst make thy nest as high as the eagle, I shall bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord."

A passage from Nahum (2:35) is believed to refer to a modern super-highway at night, alive with lighted cars, speeding, often getting into accidents. "The chariots shall be with flaming torches," says the text, "and they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways, they shall run like lightning."

Nor is the aeroplane forgotten. An article in a B.I. publication reveals how Ezekiel could foresee the days of aviation in his picturesque, often obscure prophecies. Excerpts are, " . . . And I looked, and behold a whirlwind came out of the north . . . everyone had four wings . . . and they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass . . . their wings were joined to one another . . . they turned not when they went; they went everyone straight forward." In similarly coloured language are found alleged references to marching armies, mass

There were shouts of congratulations all round when suddenly a thick voice was heard to exclaim: "Whash sho wunnerful about that. When I wash born I weighed only 2 pounds 6 ounshes."

Everyone craned their necks in astonishment to see who the speaker could be. He was a big, burly man who stood six-foot-two in his socks, and he was very drunk.

The Coming Empire Of Israel

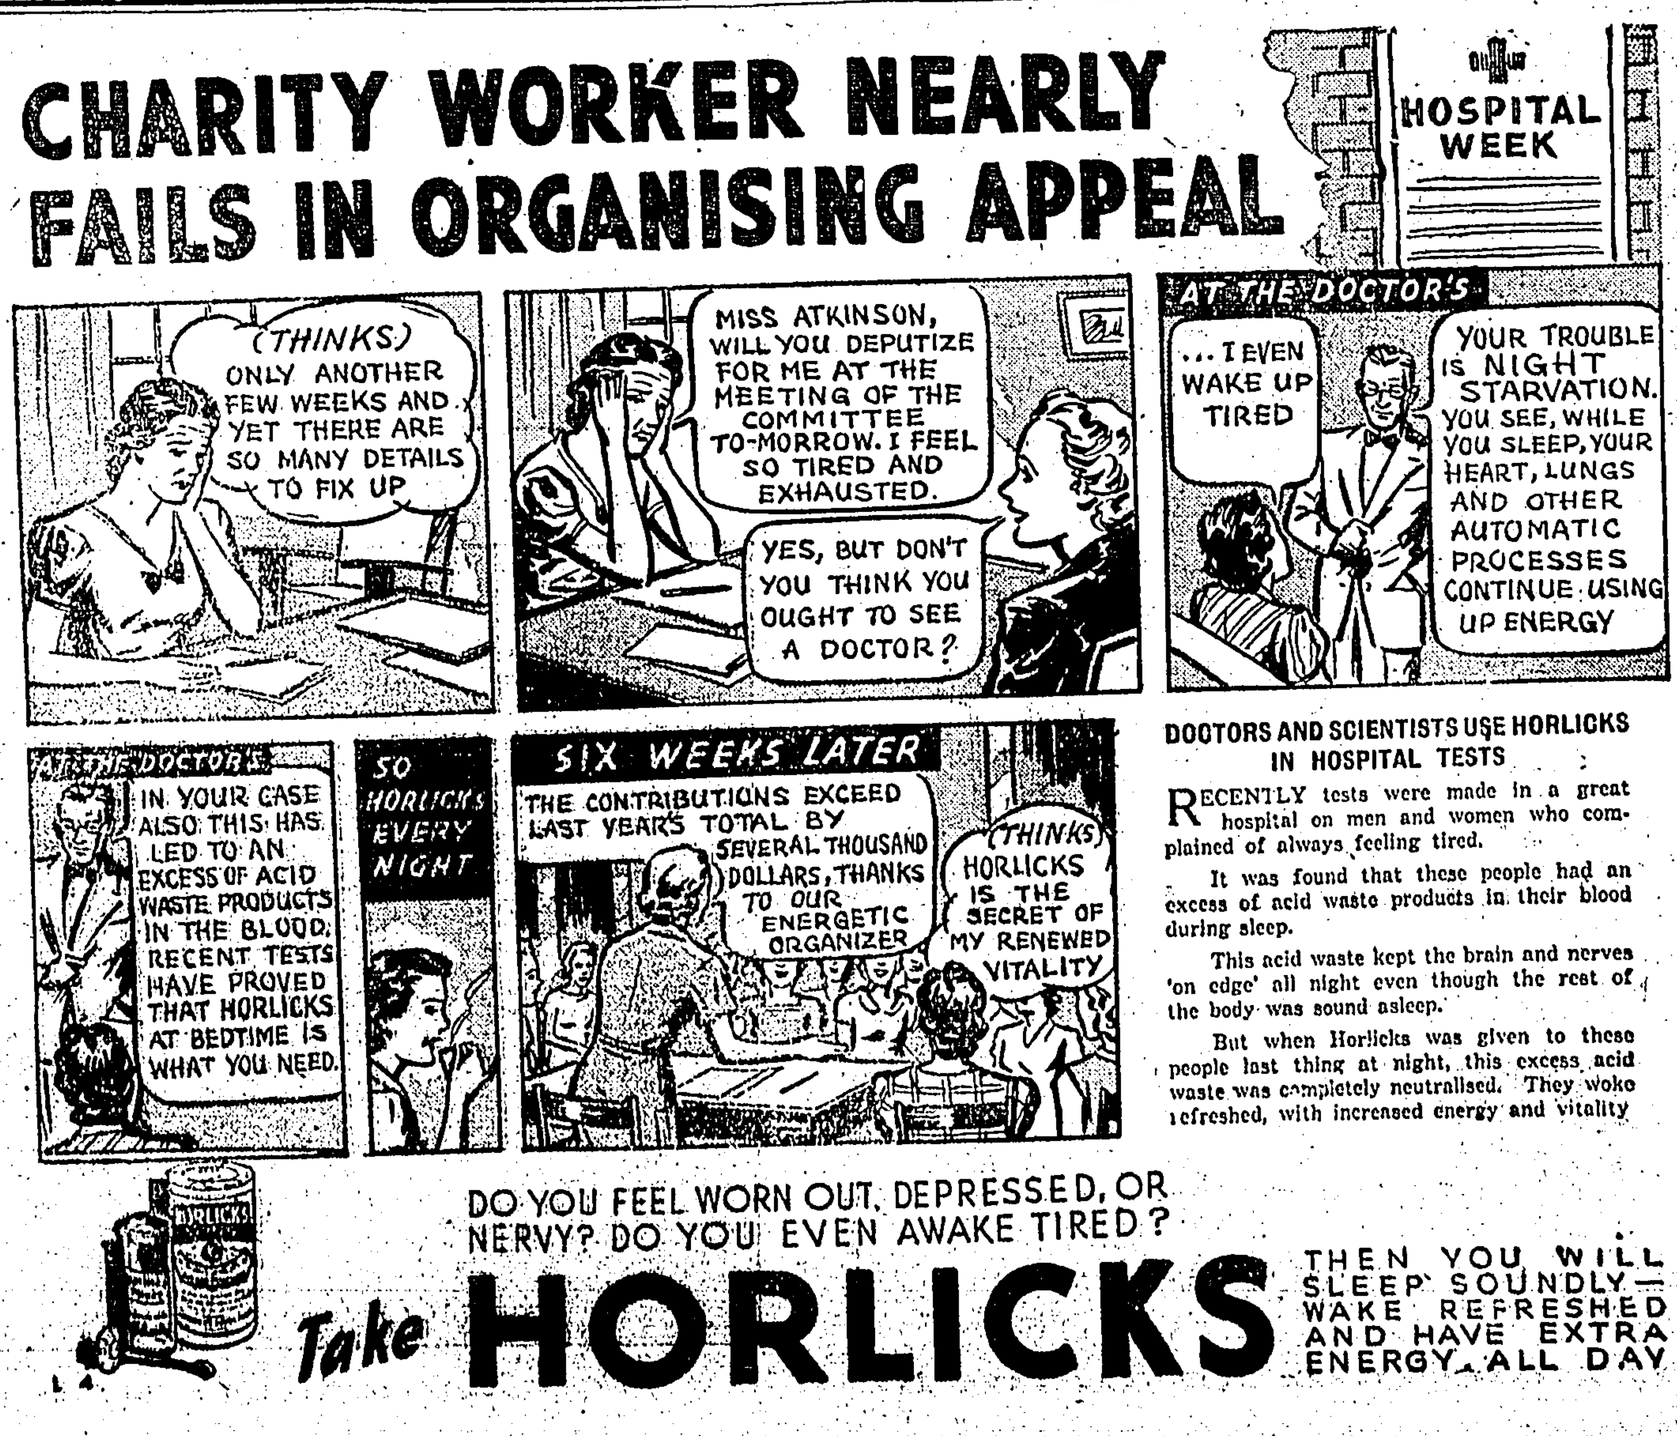
How the British-Israel movement first started has been the subject of wide controversy. "According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica account, which is not accepted by B.I. Headquarters, the first British-Israelite was Richard Brothers (1757–1824), a naval officer who dabbled in prophecies and went insane. He declared himself to be "a nephew of the Almighty" and "Prince of the Hebrews," destined to lead the Jews back to the land of Canaan. He was finally imprisoned as a criminal lunatic because he made horrible predictions of impending death and destruction which startled the public.

The British-Israelites claim that their beliefs had more dignified and more ancient beginnings. For centuries, there have been individuals and small groups who instinctively felt that the British were in reality the Children of Israel; from 665-1634 A.D., 150 references can be found that infer the relationship between the ancient Israelites and the Anglo-Saxons. Still later, the Puritans called themselves "the seed of Abraham, God's servants, and the children of Jacob His Chosen." The Irish contributed to the discussion, when in 1723, Dean Abbadie wrote that unless the Ten Tribes of Israel "are flown in the air or sunk in the earth," they must be in existence to-day in Europe as a nation. In 1871, Father B. Murphy offered proofs that they came from Egypt directly to Ireland. Modern British-Israel had its origin in 1919, when, in the flush of post-war victory, the world wide federation was formed, embracing believers in all parts of the globe.

In recent years, British-Israel believers have been more than amply repaid for their faith. To them the present unrest and chaos is regarded as the necessary prelude to the happy ending. And the ending is guaranteed to be a happy one.



DOCTORS AND SCIENTISTS USE HORLICKS IN HOSPITAL TESTS

RECENTLY tests were made in a great hospital on men and women who complained of always feeling tired.

It was found that these people had an excess of acid waste products in their blood during sleep.

This acid waste kept the brain and nerves 'on edge' all night even though the rest of the body was sound asleep.

But when Horlicks was given to these people last thing at night, this excess acid waste was completely neutralised. They woke refreshed, with increased energy and vitality

DO YOU FEEL WORN OUT, DEPRESSED, OR NERVY? DO YOU EVEN AWAKE TIRED?

Take HORLICKS

THEN YOU WILL SLEEP SOUNDLY — WAKE REFRESHED AND HAVE EXTRA ENERGY ALL DAY
